It is with regret that the people of Scio learn that the Misses Ruth and Remoh Evans and Celia Bump, three popular teachers, have resigned their positions in the school here and will not return to Scio next year.

How sweet is brotherly love. A couple of our citizens who were swearing dire vengeance upon each others heads a few months ago and breaking into the limelight by saying naughty things about each other through the columns of the News, were seen riding out of town together Saturday afternoon on the front seat of a little red wagon, grinning at each other like school boys.

Rumors and counter rumors have been floating through the air of Scio recently in regard to certain conditions, but whether they are true or not, is not our purpose to discuss just at this time. However, one fact is so patent that it would seem there is no room for argument when it comes to a choice between antagonizing a large number of tax payers and home owners whose sole interests are in this community, by holding up for one individual whose interest in the welfare and upbuilding of the town is represented by a monthly pay check, the contents of a suitcase and the desire for a cheap week-end rate to Portland.

The eleven year old son of C F Sargent had one of his hands blown off last Sunday while out in the pasture at home. The little fellow refuses to tell how the accident happened, but it is presumed that he had secured a stick of dynamite from some source and was playing with it. He is getting along as fine as possible at the Parker hospital.

UPPER SANTIAM EVENTS

The Bible mentions the caterpillar and the canker worm. They are abroad in the land. Go through the orchard, cut off all limbs on which there are caterpillar nests and burn them. Go through the second time and get nests missed the first time. Go through the third time and get the nests missed the second time. If you like to eat wormy fruit leave them on.

The Mill City district voted a three mill tax for a new school building. It will double the room capacity.

Road boss Shephard is at work on Main street in the city of Lyons. The citizens of that burg contributed $75. and S— does the rest.

Mr and Mrs Shephard and Mr and Mrs Kappinger were called to Molalla to see a relative who is not expected to live.

We had the most orderly and quiet election ever held up here. No swearing, no boisterous and rough talk, no feet stuck up on desks, and everybody was on his good behavior and honor. Guess why?

Fred Bassett was up from his Waldo Hill farm visiting old friends recently.

Mr Bertram, a long time resident of this place, was buried at Kings Prairie recently.

Mr Thacker and Miss Stafford of Gates were married a few days ago.

A Mr Ross, a school teacher, was looking over prospective positions. He has been a teacher in Linn county many years.

Riley Thomas, who has been ill, is on the mend.

Mr Lees, who is helping to build and rebuild the big mill, has bought a farm in the Willamette valley. He thinks Oregon is good enough for him.

Have you seen the new comet?

Mill City Fire Notes:—The fire started in the roof of the old Odd Fellows hall. There was a strong east wind blowing toward the new hall across the alley and soon set it on fire. Engine and mill whistles blew the alarm, bringing all in town out. People came from Lyons and Gates. They trained the mill hose on it, but there was lack of water.

The Presbyterian church and parsonage were on fire at times, but were saved by men on the roofs keeping them well damped with water brought by the bucket brigade.

Everything inside of all the buildings were saved except some second hand goods in the shoemaker shop.

They are optimistic over it. Rebuild is the talk. There was $3,500 insurance on the new hall also a mortgage of $2,500. The lodge meets in the high school building until they rebuild. Some talk of putting up a brick block and others favor cement. Mr Weaver, who occupied a part of the lower floor, has built a temporary building and is busy selling goods again.

Mr Weddle has opened his barber shop in a tent.

The pool room man is erecting a temporary building.

Mr Patterson had no insurance on his livery barn. The shoemaker had $300 insurance.

It happened that an agent of the Insurance Co. that insured the I O O F hall, was in town that day and helped to fight the fire, so they will be prompt in paying, no doubt.

A liberal amount of Eastern mail order advertising will be noticed in the columns of the News this week. We do not urge our readers to patronize these concerns, but they seem willing to do something that many of the home merchants do not, namely: Pay a fair sum in good hard dollars for our advertising space, and the hard dollars is what it takes to give us energy enough to shout for home industries.

Someone with more nerve than sense fired Henry Shope's vacant house on Main street last Monday night about midnight. The fire alarm was turned in by Dr Hobson who lives nearby, and the company responded promptly with the result that the flames were quickly subdued by the chemical engine. It is understood that Mr Shope intends tearing down this old shack and building a substantial house on the lots where it stands, in the near future.
