You big, brave anonymous letter writer! Say you ought to be careful, sending such letters as appears in another column of this issue. You might scare somebody sometime.

Those who are boycotting the News are in rather ticklish business holding up the editor on the street and telling him how to run his business. We wish to state for the benefit of one and all that we will advocate what we think is right regardless of fear or favor.

Early Wednesday morning, M S Lovelace called at the News office and asked if we would publish the findings of the school board meeting regarding the slanders that have been circulated concerning him. We told him we certainly would, but up to the hour of going to press we have heard no more about it. This item is given publicity merely to show that we have given Mr Lovelace a chance to state his case, but he has seen fit not to accept it.

Upwards of a dozen people who have been connected with the Scio school during the year which closes this week, have told the writer of several specific instances in which the Oregon school law has been openly and flagrantly violated this year, but the school board demands, as is their right, that to have any weight, these charges must be preferred in writing, and placed on record with the district clerk. On another page a few laws are cited which it is claimed have been violated. However, if those who have made the charges are not willing to go on record in black and white over their own signatures, before the date of the annual school meeting, the board will retain Mr Lovelace as principal for the ensuing year, as they should do. It is up to those who say they have a grievance to get busy.

EVOLUTION OF TENNIS.

The Game Was First Played With Gloves Instead of Rackets.

Tennis as we know it today originated on the continent of Europe. In the earliest form of the game, known in medieval England as "handball," the players simply passed the ball from one to the other by means of the naked hand. In due course gloves were invented by the Italians, and when later cords of tendons were stretched across them the ball was enabled to rebound with much greater force. From these gloves it was an easy step to the racket, the face of which was at first composed of wood, parchment or loosely stretched gut, and such primitive implements are mentioned by Chaucer in 1380.

Rackets were first strung diagonally, but by 1632 they had attained to some resemblance to their present form. Between hand play and the general use of the racket there was a transition period when one player used his hands and the other a bat.

The first courts were simplicity itself. At one time the French played jeu de paume with a cork ball across a line marked on the ground. Presently a bank of earth about two feet in height was substituted, and this in turn was replaced by a single cord stretched across the center of a prescribed space. Sometimes a short fringe hung from the cord, and this gradually increased in length until it developed into the modern net.

Uncovered courts were at first the fashion, but so rapidly did the game come to the fore that in order to make the players independent of the humors of the weather clerk roofs were added.

By the end of the sixteenth century there were 1,800 courts in Paris alone. Now there are under a dozen in the whole of France, those in the Tuileries, at Cannes, Deauville and Versailles being the most famous.

Of existing English courts the most ancient is that at Hampton court, which was built by Henry VIII.—London Chronicle.

Arctic Ducks and Geese.

Concerning certain features of Eskimo life along the north coast of Alaska, the account written by Vilhjalmur Stefansson says: "In the spring and summer ducks and geese, especially the former, are an important item of diet. They are pursued in kayaks when molting and killed with clubs, and large numbers of them are also secured by bolas throwing, for the migration route of the ducks along the coast is so definitely known that a man can stand in one place all day and rely on it that three out of every four flocks will fly within throwing distance. So thickly do the birds come that nowadays a competent man with a shotgun has been known to secure as many as 600 ducks in a day."

Turquoises and the Mongols.

Turquoises are the favorite stones of all the Mongol races and are generally worn in their original state except by the Chinese women, who have them roughly cut and wear them mixed with pearls and coral. Both the Tibetan men and women ornament themselves with lump turquoises, the men wearing them attached to their single gold earrings, which are worn in the right ear only.

The Word "Execute."

To "execute" means "to carry out or to perform." The law, for example, may be "executed" on a prisoner. But to say that the prisoner is "executed" is a blunder as inexcusable as it is frequent. The sentence is executed. But the man himself is killed, not "executed."

Ladies Calling Cards printed or blank for sale at this office.

Indigestion and Constipation

"About five years ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets after suffering from indigestion and constipation for years without finding anything to relieve me. Chamberlain's Tablets helped me at once and by taking them for several weeks I was cured of the complaint," writes Mrs Mary E McMullen, Phelps, N Y. For sale by all dealers.
