School Notes

The teachers' annual institute for Linn and Benton counties will be held in Corvallis, November 23-24-25. An interesting program has been prepared and the teachers are looking forward with pleasure to the meeting. The law requires that all schools of the county be closed during the three days of the institute, and teachers attend at least sixteen hours.

The students in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades are about to begin work for the exhibit at the Educational Rally.

A new feature of the school system this year is exhibited in the Thursday morning "Assemblies" every other week, the whole school from the primary department through the High School meet in the assembly hall and listen to a short program prepared by members from various rooms. A speaker from outside is usually engaged for such occasions.

L G Lewelling of Albany was here on business Tuesday.

Do you read? Do you read? Get a supply of late magazines from Sticha.

Mrs F T Thayer returned home the first of the week from Lebanon. Her father, Ben Irvine who has been seriously ill for some time, is able to be up now.

Banner Farm

Leonard Gilkey, who lives near Gilkey station, has finally succeeded in selecting a name for his farm which can be registered without duplicating a name already selected, says the Albany Democrat. The first name Mr Gilkey selected was Blue Ribbon, but he soon received a letter from secretary of state, Ben Olcott, informing him that this agrarian had been already pre-empted.

Next Mr Gilkey tried Bonnie Brae, and again came a note from the state secretary, telling the applicant that he would have to try again as Bonnie Brae had already found favor in the eyes of another.

Again Mr Gilkey tried a name beginning with the second letter in the alphabet, and the seal of the secretary's approval has finally been placed on Banner Farm, by which name Mr Gilkey's establishment will be known in the future.
