

HELLO BILLY!

WHAT ARE YOU GO-
ING TO DO

Saturday, April 24

"I would like for you to help me do a little job of work." "I am sorry John, I am going to Scio and take the kids to Morrison's Hardware store." "Is that so, what's doing."

"Morrison is going to give all the children 15 years and under a free ticket to a five reel Moving Picture show. He is going to put on some funny reels and especially one that will be very instructive to the old as well as the young. The only thing I don't like about it is us grown ups have to purchase something in order to get a ticket, but then there is several things I need and I can get a 10 per cent discount on that day, so I will buy what I need at a saving and get a free ticket to the show."

Well if that is the case, I will put off my work and take the kids down to Scio and let them have a good time, I guess they will work a little better when they get home and the time won't be missed.

I tell you John that is some stunt. Every one I have talked to about it is going, so we don't want to forget the date, Saturday April 24th, as every one will be there.

A POSTAGE STAMP HOAX.

The Story That Went With the Elephant's Beak Issue.

Stamp collecting is a peculiar but a fascinating hobby, and it is said that as many as 9,000,000 in all the world own it as a hobby. Germany, France, Austria and England rank in the order named in the number of stamp collectors they contain.

"The elephant's beak hoax" is one of the best jokes ever played at the expense of collectors. It was worked on a half dozen well known philatelists who were astonished by the announcement that a well known New York stamp collector had secured the only copy of a peculiar stamp later known as "the elephant stamp bill." This stamp bore as its central design the figure of an elephant with the beak and wings of a bird.

This stamp, so the story went, was designed by a well known South American revolutionist who was about to overthrow the existing regime. The design on the stamp was meant to designate that the new ruler had the strength of an elephant and the swiftness of a bird. But alas for the plans of mice and men! His plot was discovered, and among the supplies seized were 500,000 of the stamps of the new and yet unborn republic. These were ordered destroyed. One of the soldiers had managed to smuggle about a hundred of these away, but he was finally caught and shot at daybreak. Before his execution, however, he had given one stamp to a little boy, and this had in some very reasonable and plausible way found the New York collector after many months.

The stamp was naturally of great price and would have brought a big sum had not several collectors compared notes and found that each had in his possession on approval the only elephant bill stamp in existence. In this way the interesting hoax was discovered.—New York Mail.

This I, moreover, hold and dare affirm, wherever my rime may go; Whatever things be sweet or fair, love makes them so; whether it be the fillibabbs that charm to rest the nursing lard or that sweet confidence of sighs and blushes made without a word; whether the dazing and the flush of softly sumptuous garden bowers or by some cabin door a bush of ragged flowers.—Alice Cary.

Study of Life.

Life has been to me simply an opportunity to learn and enjoy and, through my books, to share my enjoyment with others. I have had no other ambition. I have thirsted to know things and to make the most of them. The universe is to me a grand spectacle that fills me with awe and wonder and joy and with intense curiosity. — From "Our Friend, John Burroughs," by Clara Barrus.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved

Why suffer from rheumatism when relief may be had at so small a cost? Mrs. Elmer Hatch, Peru, Ind., writes, "I have been subject to attacks of rheumatism for years. Chamberlain's Liniment always relieves me immediately and I take pleasure in recommending it to others." 25 and 50 cents bottles. For sale by all dealers.
