AND DON'T MAKE YOUR ONLY STOP IN PORTLAND

The latest thing to be regulated in Portland is the poster for the moving picture shows.

A law prohibiting walking and trespassing on railroad right of way in Oregon would be along the line of "Safety First" and would save hundreds of lives of thoughtless people and would not take a new commission to enforce it.

At the International Press Congress in San Francisco Edgar B Piper of the Oregonian, Portland took exception to the increasing Federal control of publications: "I do not proclaim the right of a newspaper to print what it pleases, when it pleases and where it pleases, but I repudiate the implied assumption and exercise, by Government of the function of newspaper administration in detail.

GETS THE BACON

It is always refreshing to see a paper boost for its home section, but the following pathetic paragraphs taken from an Eastern Oregon exchange would hit harder if mention of the Willamette valley was omitted.

"Dr Chick was out to his ranch above town last Monday and reports that his grain will come out in fine shape with a fair yield. He is satisfied that it will pay a dividend and that is stranger to the Willamette Valley farmer. They are all anxious to get settled in this section, and this ranch is only one of many in this section that bring home the bacon..... Frank Wilson was in Tuesday to get some fresh vegetables. He expects to start harvesting next Friday. His wheat will go about ten bushels to the acre."

Now wouldn't that get your nanny? Why bless your heart, the farmers in this section raise their own vegetables, and fifty bushels of grain to the acre is hardly worthy of special mention.

True, the dry farming sections of eastern Oregon have their admirers, but it will be some time before the exodus from the Willamette valley to the sun baked sands of the sage brush country will materially decrease our population.

Had Them Anyway.

An American traveler in England found an item like this in his hotel bill: "To peacocks, 8 shillings."

He complained and asked for light on the path.

He was curtly informed that the peacocks were on the bloomin' lawn, and if he did not look at them it was his own fault, you know.—Exchange.

Bunched His Blunders.

"John," said Mrs. Billus after the caller had gone away, "I wish you wouldn't bunch your blunders so."

"What do you mean, Maria?" asked Mr. Billus.

"I didn't mind your telling her that you were ten years older than I, but you followed it up a minute later by letting it slip out that you were fifty-two."—Chicago Tribune.

Funny For Her.

A New England lad was intently watching his aunt in the process of making pies and cake. He seemed very much inclined to start a conversation, an inclination, however, which the aunt in no way encouraged. She continued in silence to assemble the ingredients of a mammoth cake.

"Tell me something funny, auntie?" finally ventured the boy.

"Don't bother me, Tommy," said the aunt. "How can I when I am making cake?"

"Oh, you might say, 'Tommy, have a piece of the pie I've just made.' That would be funny for you."—Exchange.

Hard Life of English Cabinet Men.

The laboriousness of a cabinet minister's life was realized by John Bright, who declared that a man in office required "very strong health, a very excellent stomach and a conscience that does not trouble him." Peel, according to Greville, when resigning the leadership, begged the queen never to recall him, since he could not forget that Pitt, Fox and Canning had all died in office, the victims of overwork and worry, and that, worse still, Lord Castlereagh and Lord Liverpool had also died in office, the one a maniac and the other an idiot.—London Chronicle.
