Chester Dimond, who has been editor of the Harrisburg Commonwealth for the past twenty months, has gone to Fallon, Nevada, where he has accepted a good salaried position. The writer worked with Mr Dimond a few years ago, and knows him to be a clean, conscientious young man, but the Commonwealth has been playing a losing game from the start, as the field was ably filled by the Bulletin before the advent of the former paper. Ray Dean of Halsey will be in charge of the Commonwealth temporarily. Editor Morgan of the Bulletin extends his regrets to Mr Dimond in the following manner:

"The Bulletin extends its regrets to the Commonwealth. Editor Dimond, who has been starving long enough, is to go, and it will be a long time before as good a printer, as perfect a gentleman will take his place. May he find a just reward in Nevada for his long suffering in Harrisburg."

The expected has happened—the Sherwood Journal, aged one year, seven months and a day, has gone to the gaping newspaper boneyard. In the News-Sheet, E O Shepherd was giving the people of Sherwood all that his patronage would justify, but a faction that chafed under his outspoken opposition to saloons, induced one Frank M Melville, a very nice appearing young fellow, to butt in with the Journal where the field is scarcely big enough to support one good paper decently, and the inevitable has happened. It is simply a case of a few disgruntled business men trying to get even by inducing a short-sighted newspaper man to waste a lot of time and some hard cash, in trying to build up an opposition paper in a field that was already occupied. But it is an old, old story in the newspaper world, and the crop of suckers still remains good, so it seems.—Newberg Graphic.
