AS THE EDITOR SEES IT

We had cherished the fond hopes that the United States might go down in history as the one great nation that escaped participation in the scourge of war that is devastating the world. But hope is only hope, and oftentimes it is but an optimistic dream. The sacking of Columbus, N. M. by that arch bandit, Villa, and his horde of cutthroats brings us even to the brink of the sea of blood. It is imperative that Villa be captured and executed, and this duty devolves upon the army of the United States. To perform this duty the army must invade vast portions of Mexican territory. It may be done without a clash with Carranza and his government, but the outlook is not hopeful. Any day some act may be committed which will force us into a long and costly war. Blood, blood, blood! Everywhere we turn it is nothing but blood!

What is the world coming to, anyway? Can you tell? If you can you are more than human. England, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, Belgium, Serbia, Bulgaria, Turkey, Montenegro, Japan, Portugal, all shedding their hearts' blood in a useless cause, setting the world on fire to satisfy the jealousy and hatred of kings, emperors and aristocratic fools. What will history say? Why, the world will be fortunate if there is anyone left to write a history. A few countries are left that are ostensibly at peace, but even in those lands the volcano is seething and ready to burst forth in all its fury. Spain is restless and irritated, China is smoldering with internal revolt, Sweden, Norway and Greece are on fire; everywhere and at every hand it is either war or preparation for war. And now we, the fairest of all lands, a people who love peace above all peoples of the earth, are dipping our feet into the rivers of Mexican blood, and there seems no way of staying our steps. We must avenge the sacking of our territory and the massacre of our innocent citizens, let the consequences be what they may.

We'd just be eternally tickled if we could ride around in an auto like so many of our neighbors are doing. But alas, those delinquent subscribers who always forget to think.

Advertising is like patriotism in war time. It is irresistible, and draws the people right into your store. Be patriotic Mr Merchant, by being an advertiser.

There is but one fitting fate for Villa and his gang. They should be jerked to hell at the end of a rope.

Women kiss when they meet, men shake hands, and animals rub noses. But what will Villa and the devil do when they meet?

Incidentally, it is more profitable to go out and get a thing than to howl because it doesn't come your way.

Presumably, however, the sun will continue to shine upon us unless it is obscured by the clouds of war.

As our own individual contribution, we'll cheerfully furnish the rope to hang Villa.

But, then, preparedness might even be extended to the commercial welfare of Scio.

But the pessimist, you know, sees an opportunity after the optimist has grasped it.

Soon, however, the poor dove of peace will have no place even to call its roost.

Upon second thought, Scio is even a better town than we had imagined. Tie to it.

Bullets, like joy riders, never pause to take stock of the damage they inflict.

To be sure, we might delegate the Mexican task to Ford's pilgrims.

Old Uncle, however, still has a few drops of red blood left.

Yes, sister, you may sleep in peace. Funston's on the job.

Even one fleeting smile is worth a whole year of frown.

Health, wealth and cussedness are modern triplets.

Time, tice and the war wait for no man.

Too proud to fight? Villa won't think so.

Alas! Peace to the ashes of peace!

And will Mexico never end?

Cheer up and stay cheered.

After Villa, who next?

Do something yourself.
