

THE IRISH DONATION.

When the Emerald Isle Helped Our Famished Colonists.

It is an interesting fact, and one that is not known to many, that the people of Ireland sent relief to the pilgrim fathers in this country in a time of distress and need, resulting from the Indian war.

King Philip's war was brief, but it had its havoc and terrors, which several historians have tried to describe. The flower of the New England colonies fell in battle or were murdered by the Indians, very often under circumstances of the most revolting cruelty.

Many towns in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island were laid in ashes, crops were razed, cattle destroyed and numerous non-combatants fell victims to the bloody and devastating raids of the savage hordes. In these times of distress and misery the people of Ireland promptly came to the relief of the American sufferers, which event is known in history as "the Irish donation," and it is a remarkable fact also that no other country in Europe came to the rescue of the famished colonists.

The ship Katherine, which brought the relief, sailed from Dublin for Boston on or about Aug. 17, 1676. The extent or value of the consignment is uncertain, but from the fact that the cost of the freight was the very large sum of £450 and that a committee of three men was sent out with it from Dublin, it may be assumed that it was liberal in the extreme.

In Massachusetts and Connecticut records may be seen references to a controversy which arose between the colonial officials regarding what each deemed its "proper share in the Irish charity." The council of Massachusetts in a letter to Connecticut dated Jan. 4, 1677, reported that "600 families, consisting of 2,263 persons, were in distress in the several towns of the colony," and they called upon Connecticut "for a similar account," so that "we may proportion what is divisible among us."

The Irish committee being located at Boston, Connecticut replied to Massachusetts on Feb. 28, 1677, demanding that the latter send them "our proportion of the Irish charity," and in the colonial records may be read many letters on the subject passing between the two sister colonies.

Toward the close, however, Connecticut relinquished her share, saying, "God has given supplies to our people, so we remit to you our right in the Irish charity," and at a session of the general court of Connecticut in May, 1677, this act was recorded: "The court upon good reason moving them to remit their part in the Irish charity to the distressed persons in the Massachusetts and Plymouth colonies."

It is further recorded that from "the Irish donation," in Massachusetts alone, exclusive of Boston, "forty-seven towns, 310 families, or 2,351 persons in all," were succored.—Letter in New York Times.

A Gormandizer.

Some years ago the late Marquis of Queensberry made a bet of 1,000 guineas that he would produce a man who would eat more at a meal than any Sir John Lade could find. The bet being accepted, the time was appointed, but his lordship not being able to attend the exhibition he wrote to his agent to know the result and presently received the following note:

"My Lord—I have not time to state particulars, but merely to acquaint your grace that your man beat his antagonist by a pig and an apple pie."

The March King's stately name is known wherever music holds its own, wherever drums and cymbals throb, and mark how people smile thereat; they know what Sousa's music is; it's melody without the fizz; it's full of energy and pep, and makes old graybeards dance a step; they hear the sound of marching men, of chargers trotting down the glen, the shock of battle and the roar, and billow: beating on the shore. And Sousa when he would compose that music which the whole world knows, fills up his pipe with good old "Tux" (name 't'other brands, and he says, "Shucks!"). Tuxedo is the smoke of men who do big things with lyre or pen, who make the old world's wheels go round, whose names will down the ages sound.

"All the vim, energy and enthusiasm we put into the playing of 'The Stars and Stripes Forever' we find in the tobacco use of Tuxedo."
