FIRST WASHINGTON STATUE.

The Incident That Gave Houdon Just the Pose He Wanted.

In Washington's diary for Oct. 3, 1785, he writes that about 11 o'clock, after they were in bed, Mr. Houdon and his three young men assistants arrived, coming by boat from Alexandria.

During the sculptor's two weeks' stay, Washington sat for a bust that was modeled in clay, writing in his diary a full account of the method of mixing the plaster of paris and the making of the molds, a process in which he was greatly interested. He also submitted to the unpleasant operation of having a life mask made of his features in order to insure a perfect likeness. In the presence of Mr. Madison exact measurements of his figure were made and full details of his uniform were noted to enable the sculptor to complete his work.

The clay bust was then left by the sculptor at Mount Vernon, where today it is the most highly valued of all of Mount Vernon's relics of the Father of His Country. But the life mask and molds of the bust Houdon himself took to Paris, not trusting them to the hands of his assistant, "for," said he, "if they are lost in the ocean I am determined to perish with them."

One day, during his stay at Mount Vernon, Washington was looking at some fine horses, with a view to their purchase, but the high price asked by the groom in charge so incensed him that the man was promptly sent away. Houdon, who witnessed the transaction, saw, with an artist's eye, in Washington's pose and expression the very thing needed for his statue and made a memorandum of it. On Oct. 19, Washington writes, "Mr. Houdon, having finished the business which brought him hither, went up Monday with his people, work and implements in my barge to Alexandria to take passage in the stage for Philadelphia next morning."

The statue, according to agreement, was to be finished in three years, but was not completed until 1793. Jefferson saw the work as it progressed and was enthusiastic over the likeness and characteristic attitude that the sculptor had caught.—H. A. Ogden in St. Nicholas.

Early Newspaper Ads.

Advertisements in newspapers, as we know them today, were not general till the beginning of the eighteenth century. In fact, prior to that time it was dangerous to attempt such a thing. For instance, there was a penalty of £50 for advertising a reward with "No questions to be asked" for the return of the things stolen, half of which was paid by the advertiser and half by the printer. In addition to this, there was a duty on advertisements according to the number of lines, which amounted to anything from a few pennies to several shillings per ad. This duty was not fairly abolished in Great Britain until the year 1853.

Your Own Home.

"Save your money and buy a home," was the oft and oft repeated advice of H. H. Rogers to young men in his employ. He always added, "Neither opportunity nor fortune can knock at the door of a man who has no home."

This unique distinction is due solely to the wonderful quality and flavor of Spear Head—the richest, mellowest, tastiest chew in the whole world.

Spear Head is the choicest of all red Burley, hand-stemmed and made into mellow-sweet plugs in a perfectly clean, most sanitary factory.

You can't chew the flavor out of Spear Head, because it's a part of the tobacco. That rich, ripe, red Burley taste keeps on pleasing you as long as you keep on chewing.
