CHAPTER BOX

Religion of Ancient Rome.

The religion of the old Romans was patriotism. In the republic—or in its better days, at least—the love of country was the all dominating feeling. Rome was all. To live for it, to die for it, to sacrifice on behalf of its welfare the most sacred possessions of life, was the Roman's religion. Decius, Regulus and the rest of the worthies who cheerfully sacrificed themselves upon the altar of their country were the Roman "saints." To do all for the state, and, having done all, to die for it if necessary—that was the religion of the men who made Rome the capital of the world.—Exchange.

Censored Both Ways.

Many years ago one of the Parisian theaters came under the management—or at least the proprietorship—of a rich native of the Ottoman empire, who nevertheless kept a keen eye on the accounts. Among the items of expenditure was one of three francs a week for meat for eight or ten cats kept to protect the canvas scenes, etc., from the ravages of the rats. This item was promptly disavowed by the Turkish proprietor, who wrote upon the margin of the bill the following dilemma: "If the cats eat the rats, wherefore the meat? If they don't, wherefore the cats?"

Shaking Hands at French Funerals.

A most painful custom at French funerals is the posting at the exit door of the church wherein the ceremonies take place of the male head of the deceased person's family, the widower or the eldest son or brother, whose duty it is to shake hands with every person who has been present at the obsequies when once they are over and people are going away. It is not etiquette for the gentleman to speak to anybody, but if he is moved to tears his weeping is considered a most appropriate action.

Acting Versus Drawing.

To a group of friends Ellen Terry once said: "Acting is not like drawing. You make a line. If it is wrong you rub it out at once and make another. With acting that is impossible. There is no altering. It must stand. I often feel as if I must cry to the audience, 'Oh, that is wrong, not as I meant it to be; let me act that part or sentence over again.'"

Manganese.

Manganese is one of the substances which had long been used in the arts before its existence as an independent metal was recognized. From prehistoric times it was employed as a coloring material, but it was not known to be a distinct metal until 1774. In India the primitive smiths used it as a flux and as an alloy for holding iron and bronze.

Boosts for School Fair

The following letter has been received from Prof O V White: We want our school exhibit at the Linn County Fair this year to be first class and also to be a prize winning exhibition. Now is the time to begin getting fruit, (canned, jellies, etc); garden vegetables, grains, bird houses, poultry of every description, dresses and aprons ready.

Let us all pull together to put our school in the first rank. Parents may be of great assistance to their children by helping them plan their work as well as to encourage them in the execution of their plans. Other schools are coming with their best work and are expecting to take away every prize. Shall we do our best to capture at least a few of the prizes?

Now boys and girls let's all do our level best to have a fine display ready when the time comes for our school exhibit in September.

Liver Trouble

"I am bothered with liver trouble about twice a year," writes Joe Dingman, Webster City, Iowa. "I have pains in my side and back and an awful soreness in my stomach. I heard of Chamberlains tablets and tried them. By the time I had used half a bottle of them I was feeling fine and had no signs of pain." Obtainable everywhere.

It will be appreciated if those who have promised word on subscription to the News, will deliver same soon.
