PAPERS FROM DISTANT LANDS

by the readers are numerous and lengthy.

The editorials are generally of a more dignified and serious nature than American productions.
The daily papers devote more space to book reviews and detailed reports of scientific progress than American newspapers do.
Humor is not so noticeable and cartoons are used more rarely than with us.

Very few, if any, of the colonial papers issue a "pink sheet," but they supply this omission by devoting a large proportion of every issue to the sporting news.

With few exceptions the advertising pages would give our "ad" writers the nightmare.
They seem to have little conception of the value of space or of attractive methods of presenting either the text or the illustration.
A pleasing relief to this monotony is afforded by the "ads" of American advertisers which are rather numerous on their pages.

SCHOOL NOTES

The Jefferson High School Glee Club will be at Scio March 2.
They will give an entertainment in the High School Auditorium.
Admission 15 and 25c.

Lavina Bauman and Ethel Ingram returned Monday evening from Salem where they had been attending an Endeavor convention.

Kenneth White has returned to school this week after being sick with the La Grippe.

The Seniors are selecting a play which they will give at the Miss Forbes room and the high school met in the assembly hall and spent about a half hour singing Wednesday morning.

The Juniors are going to give a play about the last of March.

A program was given in the assembly hall on Washington's birthday by the Freshmen. Dr Geselbracht of Albany gave a splendid address on Washington.
After this, the school was dismissed for the remainder of the day.

WONDERFUL BILLIARDS.

The Game Frank Ives Played When He Was Near Death.

Had Frank C. Ives lived he would without doubt have become the greatest billiard player the world ever saw. When Ives got sick he sold his interest in the room he had opened in New York, but continued to make the place his headquarters until declining health caused him to start for Mexico, where he died after reaching Progresso on Aug. 31, 1899.

One evening the late Ferdinand Poggenburg visited the room and, finding Ives, said: "Come on, Frank, and play some billiards with me. I want a little practice for a tournament."

"How shall we play?" asked Ives.
Poggenburg replied: "I want to play 14-2. Suppose you play 600, and I will make all I can."

Ives agreed, and, although emaciated by the lung trouble which resulted fatally a few months later, the "Napoleon" of billiards had the grit to engage in a long game. He won the bank, counted on the opening stroke, and Poggenburg sat down. There he sat until the game was finished. Poggenburg did not get a shot.

Playing with the care and perfection which characterized his performances when a well man, Ives retained control of the balls until he had scored 600. Then he almost collapsed. As he withdrew from the table he remarked: "If I had had another point to make I would not have been able to make it. I was able to make the run because my mind was on 600 points."

Poggenburg declared he enjoyed the entertainment more than if he had a chance to play and pronounced the exhibition the most wonderful he had ever seen.—Exchange.

Old Time English Fops.

A gallant's toilet in the days of the Tudors in England was no easy business, and a slow or clumsy servant no doubt got many an oath and blow if he failed to tie up the points of the hose, lace the doublet or arrange the stomacher and frilled shirt to his master's satisfaction.
A gentleman's dress had so many fastenings, with so much tying and lacing of his garments together, that it was impossible that he should ever get costumed (sic) without assistance. The long hose had to be securely tied by a number of latchets to the doublet; the doublet itself, was laced up the front, and the sleeves, being slashed to show the shirt sleeves, had also to be laced sometimes.—"History of English Dress."

Weatherwise Birds and Fish.

The seagull makes a splendid living barometer. If a covey of seagulls fly seaward early in the morning sailors and fishermen know that the day will be fine and the wind fair, but if the birds keep inland, though there be no haze hanging out toward the sea to denote unpleasant weather, interested folk know that the elements will be unfavorable. Of all weatherwise fish the dolphin is the most remarkable.

During a fierce gale or a storm at sea the mariner knows that the end of it is nearer if he can see a dolphin or a number of that fish sporting on the high sea waves.

Followed the Example of Cato.

In the first year of the last century London affected great admiration for Cato's suicide, the feeling being aroused by Addison's play. A gentleman named Budgett, after witnessing its performance, threw himself into the Thames on his way home. His body was recovered, and on it was found a scrap of paper with these words: "What Cato did and Addison approved must needs be right."

Peter the Great at Table.

Peter the Great loved and most frequently ordered for his own special enjoyment a soup with four cabbages in it; gruel, pig, with sour cream for sauce; cold roast meat, with pickled cucumbers for salad; lemons and lampreys, salt meat, ham and hamburger cheese. He began dinner with cabbage water and closed the banquet with goblets of burgundy.

His Mite.

"It is my belief, and I venture to assert it," declared the lecturer, raising his voice, "there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests."

A rather timid looking man quietly arose in the rear of the hall and said, "I've shot woodpeckers."—
