Holley Items

The Citizens Community and Educational meet at Holley was attended by a very large crowd of people. There were five schools there which took part in the exercises, each one rendering their part of the program with credit to themselves and teacher. The Holley grade school, C. L. Malone, teacher and the Holley high school, Miss Hazel Traver, teacher, rendered their parts with credit. Prof. Kilpatrick of the University of Oregon, gave a talk on education which was greatly appreciated by all. Prof. Skelton, of O. A. C., gave a very interesting talk on good roads, showing their benefit to the farmer and to everyone. Supt. W. L. Jackson and Prof. Baker, both took active parts in the meet and to whom the Holley people tender their thanks for the very able manner in which they conducted the exercises. There was something doing all the time. The Holley choir furnished music and which was highly appreciated. When dinner was announced, it was not necessary to give the second invitation, for everyone responded at once. Three long tables were laden to their utmost capacity with the very best the land could produce in the way of eatables and to which all did justice.

Come again Messrs Jackson and Baker. We are ever ready to cooperate with you in your efforts to build up the cause of education.

The Thrice-a-Week Edition of The New York World

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much News at So Low a Price

The year 1914 has been the most extraordinary in the history of modern times. It has witnessed the outbreak of the great European war, a struggle so titanic that it makes all others look small.

You live in momentous times and you should not miss any of the tremendous events that are occurring. No other newspaper will inform you with the promptness and cheapness of the Thrice-a-Week Edition of the New York World. Moreover, a year's subscription will take you far into our next presidential campaign.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Scio Tribune together for $1.90. The regular price is $2.25.

For Sale—Team, wagon, harness and a yearling colt. Will be sold cheap if taken soon. Terms if desired. For particulars see C. S. Wiley, Scio, Ore.

Shelburn Items

Alfred Blatchford has been making extensive improvements in his store and now has one of the neatest and most commodious country stores in the valley.

Rev. Blair of Albany, held services here Sunday morning and evening.

Dennis Trexler and wife, of Portland, are visiting relatives in Shelburn.

Mrs. Lawson, of Gates, has accepted a position in Blatchford's store.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Gibbons and daughter were in Eugene Sunday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Gibbon's uncle, William Moore, a former resident of near Thomas.

The many friends of Mrs. Earl Gooch will be pleased to learn that she is so far recovered as to be able to return from the Portland hospital.

Mrs. Miller, accompanied by her daughter, Nora, spent Saturday and Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. C. McClain of Buena Vista.

Our genial station agent is spending his leisure moments clearing a garden spot on his recently acquired tract east of Shelburn.

Mrs. Stanley Taylor made a business trip to Salem the latter part of the week.

Most of the residents of our valley attended the funeral of Miss Hoagland of West Scio, at the Miller cemetery Sunday.

The initial game on the Shelburn diamond last Sunday was won by the former. Score stood 4 to 1. The visitors making their four runs in the first inning, after which we had a good exhibition of the national game.

Quite a large crowd attended the dance in the Testre hall Saturday evening.

Are Foxes Vegetarians?

Foxes are not generally accredited with vegetating instincts. You never see their tracks, as you see those of rabbits around a young oak tree shoot which has been nibbled down to the tough stem. But Aesop evidently thought otherwise when he wrote his fable of the sour grapes, and there is plenty of testimony that Aesop was right. Foxes do eat wild grapes as many observers have testified, climbing a considerable way to get them, and probably at times they eat berries and perhaps apples. I have found their tracks, at any rate, beneath apple trees. I have also been confidently assured that they eat the persimmons in Virginia, that the "of houn dawgs" know how good this fruit is, too, and if you wish to find the very best bee tree take a "dawg" with you. Hungry Hill Items

(Delayed from last week)

Dr. Hobson made two trips to G. A. Griffin's last week.

Thomas Small lost a fine big mare last Wednesday night by suddenly taking the colic. She died before a veterinary could be gotten.

Two new cases of the mumps is reported in the last week, but they are getting along nicely.

Miss Ella Smith left last Sunday for Walla Walla, where she will stay with her sister, Mrs. McCoy, during the summer.

Miss Myrtle Knauf, of Scio, was a guest of Miss Mary Crabtree Sunday.

Charlie's aunt was in Scio one night last week. Wonder if he has any uncles.

Carl Cyrus was in this neighborhood Sunday, trying out our good roads in an auto. But owing to the lack of sunshine he balked, but not the auto, at Newt Crabtree's gate.

STARRY WONDERS

The Changing, Drifting, Crumbling Constellations.

NOT SO PLACID AS THEY SEEM

They Are All in a Whirling, Restless Rush, Preparing to Assemble in Other Formations—Wild Flight Earthward of the Andromeda Nebula.

"That spectacle," said a friend of mine one night, pointing up to the starry sky, "always overwhelms me with a sense of unchangeableness."

"Yet," I replied, "it is the grandest type of continuous and stupendous change that the imagination could possibly conceive. Its apparent unchangeableness is that of a distant landscape seen by a flash of lightning, the wheel of a racing auto seems to be motionless. Your whole lifetime is but a lightning flash against the spinning wheels of the universe. The entire history of the world since the traditional time of Adam is but a lightning flash in the existence of the sidereal systems."

"They are all in motion, and they are all changing within themselves. Look yonder at that rich part of the Milky way, where the millions of apparently crowded stars resemble luminous clouds. If you could stand watching those star clouds for a million years instead of a few moments they would shift and roll before your eyes like the whirling vapors of an advancing thunderstorm."

"The astronomer arrives at a knowledge of the fluctuations of the universe by projecting his imagination back into the past and forward into the future. He gazes through a telescope which penetrates time instead of space. Its lenses gather together and bend to a focus beams of ages instead of rays of light. With its aid he sweeps all past and coming scenes into the field of his mental vision and strives to view them in the mass, as they are seen by the ancient of days himself."

"It is in this way that we know that all these brilliant constellations, which to the eye of the casual looker have not altered their outlines since recorded history began, are in reality as mutable and ephemeral as so many swarms of snow crystals."

"Yes, it is no exaggeration to affirm that the firmament of stars would appear to an eye endowed with immortal vision as restless and as swiftly variable as a winter storm sky filled with eddying flakes."

"Ursa Major, the Great Bear, Leo the Lion, Taurus the charging Bull, Orion the mighty Hunter, the Southern Cross, the Northern Crown, the Lyre, the Whale, the Scorpion, the Scales, Virgo the Virgin, Hercules the Doer of Deeds, Draco the Great Dragon, Ophiuchus the Serpent Bearer, the whole refulgent cycle of the sodae from Aries round to Pisces, all these, with out exception, and every starry company in the whole sky that mankind has admired and made legends about, are breaking up, crumbling, drifting asunder and preparing to assemble in other formations, like the new heaven that is to shine upon the new earth of the Apocalypse."

"Look up at Alderbaran, the red star, magnitude star in the eye of Taurus

It is going away from you at a speed of thirty five miles per second, seventy times as fast as the swiftest cannon ball. Every successive night it is 3,000,000 miles farther than it was twenty four hours before, and yet its distance is so great that it has not appreciably diminished in brightness in a thousand years.

"Then fix your eyes on a little star under the feet of Orion, which astronomers call Delta Leporis. It is flying away from us at the rate of sixty-two miles per second. That means a retreat of more than 5,250,000 miles between one night and the next, and yet Delta Leporis does not sensibly fade. It is like a distant steamer's light, so far away to begin with that no alteration of its distance can produce a change in its apparent magnitude until the time elapsed begins to bear some appreciable proportion to the space that intervenes."

"If you will regard another little star in the Whale, called Eta Cephei, you will be looking at a projectile as big as a sun, which is shooting toward us more than fifty miles a second. The great dog star Sirius, which crosses the milky way hundreds of centuries before history began, is speeding in our direction at the rate of fifteen miles a second, and the little dog star, Procyon, is chasing after him with the long stride of ten miles per second."

"The magnificent Arcturus is retiring into the depths of space with dignified step three miles a second, while Alpha Centaurus, a twin star, each of whose components equals our sun, is drawing a million miles nearer every twenty four hours. The vast Orion Nebula is retreating eleven miles a second, but that whirling wonder called the Andromeda Nebula is rushing hitherward 180 miles a second, or more than 15,000,000 miles per day."

"Lacklily for us it has plenty of sky room."

"In view of all this, do the heavens still seem to you so placid and unchangeable?"—Garrett P. Serviss in Washington Post.

The Chair of Torture.

The most prominent building in the ancient city of Nuremberg is the castle. One of its two towers was used for torture; the other served as a prison. The castle also contained a museum of horrors until it was purchased by the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, in whose possession these relics now lie. One of these was the chair of torture. It was very heavily made and studded over the seat and at the elbows with blunt topped spikes. To it the victim was tightly bound, and in a short time discomfort began to manifest itself and in time became unbearable. During its continuance the torture was increased in several ways by means of wedges being passed between the legs and screws being applied to the thumbs until they began to bleed.

A Joint Concern.

When Richard Brinsley Sheridan was in distress, in early life, one of his resources was that of writing for the fugitive publications of the day in which he was materially assisted by his wife, and many years after his entrance into the sphere of politics he was heard to say that "if he had stuck to the law he believed he should have done as much as his friend Tom Erskine; but," continued he, "I had no time for such studies. Mrs. Sheridan and myself were often obliged to keep writing for our daily leg or stouder of mutton; otherwise we should have had no dinner. One of his friends to whom he confessed this, wittily replied, "Then I perceive it was a 'joint' concern."

The Professor's Compliment.

"The professor paid me a compliment that I don't know whether to like or not."

"How is that, my girl?"

"He says I am so interesting that he is going to name a worm after me."—Pittsburgh Post.
