Estray Bull—I have taken up a large Jersey bull at my farm one mile southwest of Scio. Owner can have the animal by paying for the damage he has done and for this notice. John Kuckacka.

The Albany road from Scio via Sanderson bridge is now in fine condition. A gravel crushing plant has been established by the county court and the road from the bridge towards Albany has been regraded and graveled for two or three miles, or a distance to cover the rough and bumpy part, which made that road almost unusable for autos.

SUFFERED FOR HIS COUNTRY

Silas Deane, First American Diplomatic Agent, Received Harsh Treatment From Government.

Silas Deane, the first diplomatic agent of the United States, was born at Groton, Mass., close to 200 years ago. He became a merchant and was a delegate to the first Continental congress. In the spring of 1776 he was sent to France as a secret diplomatic agent. He posed as a merchant from Bermuda, and upon his arrival in Paris sought an interview with Count de Vergennes, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who refused to receive him. Deane was reduced to the direst poverty and was ejected by his landlady. Subsequent American ambassadors have complained of the lack of suitable embassies, but Deane was reduced to a point where he had to accept poor lodgings from a sympathetic Frenchman. Eventually he was given an audience with Vergennes and began the diplomatic relations which eventually resulted in the French alliance. In 1777 Deane was recalled.

In the bitter controversy which followed his recall Thomas Paine revealed the fact that supplies furnished the colonies had been furnished by the French government. This was considered a diplomatic indiscretion and it cost Paine his place as secretary of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Deane, driven into poverty and exile, died in England in 1789. Half a century later his claim for his services abroad was adjusted by congress and a large sum was paid his heirs.

Some years ago a captain in the U. S. army wrote a poem entitled "Me und Gott." For this the captain was severely reprimanded. All the same he had a true conception of the character of Kaiser Bill. He would not be reprimanded now.

The kaiser is trying to win by diplomacy what his boasted war machine cannot win at the battle front. If President Wilson and the Allies, through anxiety to close the war, are caught in the meshes in any way, they are less wise than the people give them credit for.
