Will Try Sunflowers.

A number of Linn county farmers this year will make careful trials of sunflowers for silage. A great deal has been said in favor of sunflowers as a silage crop, but most of these reports have come from sections of the country having different conditions from those of Linn county. However, the favorable reports seem to justify anyone taking the trouble to plant a few alongside of the corn and make a fair comparison for their own satisfaction. The experience should also be of value to others who might have similar conditions. Because of the great interest in sunflowers a great deal of seed has been sold and the probabilities are that some will turn out to be poor seed.

In order to be sure of a good supply of seed for our trials, the county agent secured 150 pounds of seed recommended by the farm crops department of O. A. C. and is furnishing it to farm bureau members at cost, or 17 cents a pound.

This lot tested 98% germination by the college test and the sample recently tested by the county agent tested 100%.

There is still some left in our supply for any who wish to try it out on a small scale. An acre or two should give a pretty good trial. It requires 5 to 7 pounds of seed per acre.—Linn County Farm Bureau News.
