SCIO, OREGON, JULY 8, 1920

DOLLAR SUPREMACY.

One hundred and forty-four years ago a new nation was born to the world. In that most remarkable document dedicated to human liberty and rights, promulgated to the world in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776, the star of liberty and justice appeared upon humanity's horizon. That star has slowly arisen since. While great strides in the progress of human liberty and progress have been made supreme to place the rights of man above the dollar, the dollar is yet supreme.

The Revolutionary war was fought to establish the rights of man above the dollar. The wars of 1812 and the Mexican war were fought for the same purpose, to enhance the value of and to protect the dollar. The wars with Spain and with Germany and Austria were caused by the greed and encroachment of the dollar upon the rights and liberty of man. In fact, all wars the world has had have had this same feature as the basic cause. We still are engaged in the same struggle. It was made prominent in the two late national conventions. It maintains in the congress and the 48 state legislatures in the enactment of laws. Too much protection is given to the wealth of the world and not enough to the promulgation of human rights and liberties.

As long as greed and selfishness is a leading impulse in the mind and hearts of man, that long will there be efforts to protect and magnify the rights of property or of the dollar, and we might add as long as the masters of millions are allowed to wield a predominating influence in the great political conventions and in the law making powers of our states and nation may we expect the battle to rage for dollar supremacy.

We must place men who are controlled by a spirit of justice and of human rights to control our destinies and relegate men who are ruled by greed, selfishness and the spirit of rule or ruin in a position where they are powerless for evil if we expect justice and right to maintain.

We know these men of greed and selfishness; why do we place them in positions of power? Why do we vote for them? We, the people, have the power if we will only lay aside prejudice, personal favorites, and such expectations of profit as we ourselves expect to reap from the activities of statesmen of greed, selfishness, rule or ruin proclivities. We must cleanse ourselves from these characteristics before we can act intelligently in protecting officialdom from occupation by these men.

We have them in all parties, but mostly in the party which has the best prospect for success, for where the carrion is these buzzards will flock. These men really have no political principles other than selfishness and desire to rule and bring about their selfish desires. They are after the almighty dollar no matter whose rights and liberties they trample in the mire to get it.

The people are being educated to these facts and responsibilities; aye, have been since the birth of our nation. But the progress is slow. It is the great masses of the people against the fewer greedy cormorants and dishonest politicians. So long as we the people are ruled by partisan prejudice will we be blind to these things. We must pick the moles from our own eyes before we can see to cleanse the eyes of our body politic.

ENFORCE THE LAW.

Why is Mr. Bryan so anxious to get a prohibition plank? A plank to enforce the laws we now have ought to be sufficient. If the Volstead law is rigidly executed it ought to make the country dry enough to suit even Mr. Bryan.

That is one trouble with enthusiasts. Our congress or state legislature enacts a law covering a certain subject. The next legislature enacts a law covering the same ground but worded differently. It makes it hard to define just what the law really is. Lawyers wrangle over it and fleece their clients, generally the people. The judge decides and the losing side appeals to the supreme court, and the court may divide nearly evenly as to what the statute or statutes really mean.

We have too much law and too little enforcement. If we have bad law enforce it and it will soon be repealed.

THE SAN FRANCISCO DEADLOCK

The deadlock in attempting to select a candidate for president which caused the San Francisco convention to extend over into this week, is not new in national conventions.

In 1852 it required 49 ballots to nominate James K. Polk of Tennessee. In 1856 it took 17 ballots to reach the nomination of James Buchanan of Pennsylvania. In 1860, when Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois was the nominee and the convention at Charleston failed to nominate, 59 ballots were cast. To nominate Seymour in 1868 required 22 ballots, and 46 to nominate Woodrow Wilson at Baltimore in 1912.

Deadlocks result when there is not a cut and dried candidate beforehand, who by common opinion of the people is not selected. It signifies that no machine politics predominate and the real choice of the delegate convention prevails.

It means a compromise; and not all the time is the best man for the place selected. It means the best man upon whom the convention can agree is the winner.

Preventing Fires on Farm.

Experience has shown that fire prevention should be universally practiced. The farmer, however, should give special attention to the elimination of fire hazards and the adoption of protective methods. His house, barn and outbuildings are usually of combustible materials; kerosene and gasoline are likely to be stored about the premises and used for light and power. He must fill his barn with hay, straw and feed which are subject to spontaneous combustion; and he is usually outside the protection of a fire department. Too often a fire started in a farm building results in total loss, and then the owner wishes he had taken some of the precautions which he had been considering.

Are there any exceptions to the principle that like produces like? Certainly; there are many cases of getting hard cash from a soft thing.
