John L. Kelly, having secured Harold Peery as pill dispenser during his absence, accompanied by Mrs. Kelly, Jack, the prize bull pup, and the other dog, and Rol Morris, started via auto for the Coos Bay country Sunday morning. Our readers should not consider Rol as secondary to the prize bull pup and the other dog, for he isn't, but in writing the item we have classified him with the other animals. Rol will be back within a week, but the rest of the party may go down the coast into California before returning.

Why Fire Prevention on the Farm?

During the year 1919 in the state, 28 per cent of the farm dwelling houses in which fire started were lost. In the cities and towns the loss was 25 per cent. The reason for this almost complete loss in the country lies in the fact that very little protection is available. The difference between the two shows in a measure the amount of saving effected by the fire departments.

These figures show clearly the great necessity for fire prevention on the farm as well as the best possible fire protection. A pressure water system, chemical extinguishers, or water barrels with buckets, are first class protection if used in time and should be installed on every farm; also ladders for getting to the roof should not be forgotten.

Every fire hazard about the place should be eliminated or kept under constant surveillance. Fire prevention should be a daily topic in the home and each individual's duty and responsibility impressed upon them, and the children should be taught from infancy of the danger of fire and what prevention means.

Fire prevention on the farm simply means the saving of millions in property, and more in life.
