

The Disease That Killed Pope Benedict XV.

By O. L. SCOTT, D. C.

It started as a cold and developed into pneumonia. The pope refused to give up and rest and this failure to appreciate the seriousness of a so-called "mere cold" gave the disease its chance to develop.

Air is the most important of the life elements. If it is withheld for five minutes death ensues. A cold that settles on the lungs starts in to do that very thing—shut out the air from the lungs. In pneumonia, the congestion or filling up of lung cells, unless checked, gradually spreads until the lungs cease to function and death results.

The newspapers said "all that science could do has been done." In Italy the science of chiropractic is comparatively unknown. There are less than a dozen chiropractors there. The record of chiropractic in influenza and pneumonia is the best of any health method. It is quite possible that chiropractic might have turned the pope toward health had an administration of this efficient new method been possible.

Pneumonia Is Conquered

"I feel that I have given chiropractic a thorough test. Not only have I been cured of sciatic rheumatism, but my little girl was cured of a severe case of pneumonia. Her fever was running 103 and 104 and she was having hemorrhages. There was a terrible congestion in her throat and lungs. On the second day after chiropractic spinal adjustments were started, the fever was reduced. In four days she was out of danger. In a week she was able to go to the chiropractor's office, and after a course of adjustments she is now as sound and well as ever."—H. C. Money, sworn statement before J. B. Atkinson, Chiropractic Research Bureau, statement No. 1301L.
