WONDER if our good American "moonshine" is being imported into South America?—They are seeing three-eyed monsters of pre-historic days down there. We have always thought that nothing but "moonshine" could cause a man to see such things.

DOWN in Scio there is a rooster objecting to being called a thoroughbred, says H. S. Nolan in the Scio Tribune. That rooster wants to be known as a purebred. Maybe he's right. But if purebreds get him any farther than thoroughbreds will he will have to crow some.—Hubbard Enterprise.

VICTOR BERGER, of Milwaukee, Wis., that indefatigable candidate for congress on the socialist ticket, has announced that he will make the race again this fall. He has been elected three times, filling one term, and twice unseated by congress. It seems congress doesn't want him, but his constituency does.

VOLUME 1, No. 1, The Siuslaw Region, has reached our desk. It is published at Florence, in Lane county, and its publishers are H. K. Saunders and Albert K. Lulay, who are well known in this part, both men having worked on the Stayton Mail. Here's wishing the new paper abundant success, and the first issue indicates progressiveness.

THERE are some provisions of the registration law which may not be generally understood. If you did not vote at the last general election it is necessary to re-register. If you have moved from one precinct to another, you must re-register. If you have attained the age of 21 it is necessary to register this spring and thus avoid the redtape of swearing your vote in on election day. Registrations may be made until April 18th.

It is a comfort to notice the gradual improvement that is being made to the Scio Tribune since the McAdoos have had charge of the paper. Last week it came out with 12 pages of five columns each, and the issue was patronized very liberally by Scio business men. The best powder that can be used to jar business men loose from their lethargy is lots of good old home news, and the Tribune is loaded with barrels of it.—Harrisburg Bulletin. We appreciate this fine compliment, Bro. Morgan.

THE Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture estimate the total expenditure for construction and maintenance of roads in this country in 1921 to be $600,000,000. The sources of this fund are approximately as follows: Motor-vehicle revenue, 19 per cent; state road bonds, 7 per cent; local road bonds, 33 per cent; state taxes and appropriations, 12 per cent; federal aid, 14 per cent; county, township and district taxes and assessments, 14 per cent; miscellaneous, 1 per cent. If we keep this up for the next ten years we ought to have some roads or be totally bankrupt.

A SURE RECIPE

Cut out the following pledge, sign it, paste it up where you can see it every 15 minutes, and watch the results:

"On my word of honor, I here and now declare that so long as I remain a resident of this community it will be my constant aim to boost all the time. I will do all I can for any public work that has the good of the community at heart. I will submit to the majority rule, and will not knock and howl my head off when things do not go my way. I realize that if this community is good enough to make my money in it is good enough to spend it in. I am resolved that hereafter I will buy everything at home that I can, I will patronize my home paper and I will always try to say a something good about my town and my people or I will keep my mouth shut."

OUR SCHOOLS AND TAXES

The total collapse of the old system of requiring parents to be the instructors and their homes the school houses for the education of their children began with the great Reformation and found its zenith a short while after the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers on the American continent.

The zenith as we want it understood was when some one designated as instructor of the children in a given district took over and became responsible for the education of the coming men and women and relieved the parents of this extra burden, many of whom took no interest in education, and a majority of whom could neither read nor write.

The forefathers builded wisely and well. They left old environments and usages behind—they saw the need of new things and new ways. They saw that progress and freedom would follow education as naturally as water runs down hill. From this crude but well founded beginning came our public schools in which the rich and poor received equal instruction and therefore an equal chance in the pursuit of happiness and a livelihood, and also in helping to shape the destinies of our body politic. This was and is maintained by taxation. As the population grew, more schools were needed and so were more taxes—and no school can prosper and become a power for good unless it has the proper support of its patrons.

Times and conditions change with each decade. What was good for the school 50 years ago is still good, but new methods, new studies, new and more modern buildings are demanded by state laws now that were left up to the districts to determine in those days. All schools must practically be alike so far as modernization is concerned, and the state fixes the courses of study and names the textbooks for a period of six years. This takes money.

The district also has much to do in keeping the school up to standard. It must keep the building in repair, paint it, purchase fuel and supplies, employ a janitor and a corps of teachers. This requires money. To be a standard school certain rigid requirements must be followed, such as the placing of an abundance of windows, proper ventilation and the necessary heating system. If there is a high school—no community big enough for one should be without it—every course prescribed must be taught, and if not taught the high school graduate is not a bit better off than a grade school graduate. If all subjects are taught the graduate is eligible to enter any college or university. If we must have a high school, let us keep it up to standard and make it a little better if possible. It takes taxes to maintain what we have (as good as any for its size), and as we have to pay taxes any way, let us boost for it all the time and bring outsiders to us to complete their education.

There is just one way to keep the tax burden down—pay cash. The interest low being paid on outstanding warrants will pay the janitor's salary, while the policy of doing business the debt way keeps the taxes up and soon the district pays out more interest than the original debt and still the debt is not paid nor reduced. It would be educational suicide to dispense with the services of a teacher, or to reduce the salaries and employ cheaper instructors—a cheap teacher is more expensive to a district than a competent, well-paid instructor.

Pay cash, competent instructors, a boost—these three things will increase attendance and reduce taxes.

Every three years by the clock our esteemed friend and Henry Ford's friend, T. M. Holt, buys a Ford, and Fred Bilyeu is the lucky salesman. Since 1910 this triennial event has happened, and this is 1922 you know, and he bought his fifth car the other day.

In this issue The Tribune begins a series of special writeups of the business houses of Scio and other parts of the county. They are timely, terse and truthful, and are worthy of reading and remembering.
