THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1922

With berry picking on hand, hoppers coming on, the children who are yet of school age are beginning to worry about the opening of school a month hence.

The rains have done a world of good in helping to revive the pastures and rejuvenating the late crops. Cows were beginning to show the need of pasture, and crops were burning up.

Henry Ford's family—Fords and Fordsons—were in preponderance in Scio Monday. And it was a great family. After seeing this array of the offspring of the Ford factories, we do not wonder at the appellation "road lice".

The strike is taking on quite a bit of territory now, and all because litigation rather than negotiation has been invoked by the powers that be. But, then, workers are wanting too much when they ask a living now and a competence for old age.

The Woman who had $16,000 to leave for the benefit of her three dogs, had more money than brains. After the death of the dogs, the money is to go to an orphan asylum. But with some people a dog is of more value than a child, and this woman surely was one who believed in the former.

Reports say, "Government ownership of railroads looms," and we suspect that is what has been planned for some time, or since shortly after they were returned to their owners after the war. Too high rates and too many high salaried officials have eaten them up, and now they want the government to operate them, if reports are true.

Elsewhere will be found a letter from C. E. Hunt, of Calpella, Calif., in which he is asking questions and seeking information of this community with an idea of locating here. If any of our readers can give him the information he wants, please write him. Be of and for the Community, and assist in locating those who want to become a part of us.

Scio can boast of one of the best little hotels in the state at the present time. It is under competent management, parties experienced in catering to the public. To assure the continuance of this worth while institution, it is necessary that the people, the lodges and others contemplating banquets or feeds, give them unstinted support—in no other way can it live and prosper and become a standing advertisement for the city and community. Cooperation with it means cooperation with each other.

Charley Hall, he who was certain that he had been nominated as the standard bearer of the republicans in the recent primaries, has now been convinced that he was not. It took a lot of money and worry, and a lot of accusations that have been proven false, to convince him. Probably now he will lay down and be good. If he had used good sense, taken the official count as final, he would have saved himself and the state a great deal of expense and chagrin, and he might have become governor four years hence, "but them days are gone forever".

Charley Hall, he who just knew the gubernatorial nomination had been stolen from him, found out when the votes were counted in the districts where he charged fraud had been practiced that he had had "pipe dreams", and immediately announced the canvass closed. According to the press, Olcott gets 31 more votes in these districts than had been given him. Now Charley feels, or ought to feel, that his advisers are mighty poor guessers. But probably Charley and his friends had more money than brains and the advisers needed some of the money.

The scheduled debate between Walter M. Pierce and J. H. Herman was a disappointment to a good many who came expecting to hear something good from both sides of the great tax question. Mr. Pierce failed to appear, on account of the illness of his wife at La Grande, to whose bedside he rushed. While there is no doubt but that some relief could and would come from single tax, it is doubtful if the people are ready to accept it and put it over at the November election this year. Mr. Herman gave a very able talk, but could not enter into the question with the same vigor he would have done had his opponent been present.

Volume 26 This Week

The Tribune starts out this week on the 26th milestone of its career, measured from the time the Santiam News came into existence, but in reality the volume number should be 32, remembering the first issue of the News way back in 1890.

But to complete 25 years in a small community is no small task. To live, tries the stamina of a newspaper much greater than it does the human. It must speak sometimes, and it hurts somebody's feelings, but a community paper never intentionally wounds.

We hope the people will continue to like the paper in greater numbers each week, and we hope our businessmen will find its advertising columns of greater value to them until every firm in Scio will be represented therein every week.

We are pleased with our past year's growth, and while we did not bring Vice-President Coolidge to Oregon to help us celebrate, we are glad he came—it gave us some class you know. We expect to grow more the coming year, with your help, and we know you'll help.

In a letter to Postmaster Sticha, T. L. Dugger says he is enjoying the weather down in California, that his health is good and that Los Angeles is doing a lot of new construction. He asks to be remembered to his friends, especially the Knights of Pythias.
