Tells of Linn's Birds

Dr. A. G. Prill of Scio appears in print in the Wilson Bulletin printed at Oberlin, Ohio, in the last issue in which he presents to the Wilson Ornithological club, a story of the nesting birds of Lake county with special reference to Warner valley. The valley lies in the extreme southeastern part of the state and at some 4500 feet elevation. The valley contains numerous lakes, many of which contain numerous islands and by virtue of the isolation has long been the brooding grounds for thousands of birds, that migrate north and south as the season of the year changes. Dr. and Mrs. Prill visited this section of the state last year for several weeks to study bird life and secure pictures at first hand of the numerous birds making their summer home in these lakes.

Dr. Prill drew a map of Warner valley showing the relative positions of the lakes and some of the isolated mountain peaks which stand at an elevation of 7,000 feet and stand as sentinels guiding the migrating flocks of fowls to and fro. Dr. Prill has given a graphic description of the lake region and many of the birds found in that region. The sand hill crane not often found, makes its home in the interior lake region, which Dr. Prill found and had the privilege of taking a kodak picture of some of the young birds and also some of the nests. This section of the state is regarded as one of the most fertile in the U. S. for the scientist. Dr. Prill is regarded as among the best authorities

Home From Vacation

Ye editor has returned from his two week's vacation in Vancouver, Wash., and at Chemawa. He is feeling much improved in health and hopes to soon be giving better service to his constituents than ever in the past. While at Chemawa, he had an opportunity to see the Indian students at work there, and the discipline is most excellent and of a character to make a lasting impression upon their minds. The school has the largest enrollment this year in its history, more than 700 children being registered. They come from almost all over the entire domain of Uncle Sam, and from Alaska. The government gives the students free education and clothes and eats. Last Thursday night he attended a party given by Supt. Harwood Hall and his estimable wife, and he had a most enjoyable time. The evening was spent in a musicale and guessing contests musically. All the attendants of the institution and all teachers were guests.

Mrs. Ann Cannon Dies

Burial services were conducted by Rev. D. V. Poling at the Riverside cemetery, near Albany, Saturday for Mrs. Ann Cannon, a former Albany woman who died in Portland Friday. Mrs. Cannon was the youngest daughter of W. B. Carey, an Oregon pioneer who crossed the plains by ox team in 1847, and settled in what was then called "Crackers Neck," between Thomas and Crabtree creeks.

Two daughters and two sons survive. They are George W. Cox of Riverside, Arthur W. Cox, of Portland, children by a former marriage; Mrs. Laura Belle Tyler, of Portland and Mrs. Ida Neiger, of Seattle. Mr. Cannon died in 1888.

Returns to England

Col. John A. Leader, former commandant of the Officers' Training Camp at the University of Oregon, Mrs. Leader and their three sons, will sail for England from St. John, New Brunswick, on Dec. 10, planning to make their home there permanently. Col. Leader bade farewell to his hundreds of friends on the campus, Friday. He will spend the week end in Portland and then proceed to Vancouver B. C. Mrs. Leader will join him there.

The former commandant has made arrangements to see the University of Oregon—University of Washington game in Seattle on Thanksgiving Day. His farewell to the team will take the form of cheering for Shy Huntington's men.

After arrival in England, Mrs. Leader will go at once to her father's home, Blackmoor Hall, Sidmouth, Devon. She has not seen her father Col. the Hon. John Pleybell-Bouverie, formerly the commander of the Seventeenth Royal Lancers, since 1917.

Col. Leader's estate is at Kael,

County Cork, Ireland. He will attempt to motor there from Dublin, although he believes he may encounter difficulties because of disorder in the county.

"I expect to visit Sir James Craig, the Ulster leader," said the colonel, before his departure. "Some of Sir James' leaders were in my regiment and I knew the Ulster premier when he served in the Boer war. I hope also to see Swift McNeill, Tim Healy, John Dillon and other Nationalist leaders."

The Leaders have made no plans to return to Oregon, and their departure was an occasion for a great deal of regret. Mrs. Leader took leading parts this winter in two University of Oregon plays presented in Guild Theatre on the "Can-Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel."
