Oregon Made Home Knitting Yarns

A great surprise for the home knitters of Oregon, but still a fact. Furthermore, this yarn is absolutely virgin wool yarn; the wool was grown in Linn County, sold by Mr. Souders to the Oregon Worsted Company (mills located at Sellwood), made into worsted yarn by Roy T. Bishop, son of C. P. Bishop, proprietor of the Woolen Mill Store of Salem. Oregon knitters try this yarn out. All colors. 45c per ball of 2 ozs. Samples sent on application. Address C. P. Bishop, Box 75, Salem, Oregon.

Bible Thought Today

THE LORD SUSTAINS—They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.—Isaiah 40:31.

Mother Earth is now taking on her spring wearing apparel and looks nice, fresh and young. The orchards, the fields and the pastures are beautiful in their blossoming of white and pink, and dresses of green.

It will probably be quite easy for all the schools of the state to close for a half holiday on April 14, for that is on Saturday. A proclamation issued recently by Gov. Pierce calls for a half holiday on the 14th to properly start the Portland baseball club off right with a big attendance and on the road to the pennant this year, and called for a half holiday by the schools.

There is a growing need for more houses in Scio, and some of our people who have vacant lots should begin the erection of residences to accommodate those who are seeking a location. The resumption of the mills are causing the inquiries, and if they cannot find houses here they of necessity must go on. Help yourself most by providing places for housing a greater population.

Howdy Friends, Responsibilities naturally gravitate to the person who can shoulder them.

NATURE FAKER CALLED
A sweet little damsel named Dayken was asked if she ever read Bacon, said she, very sweet, "You cannot read meat, So snap to and cut out the fakin'."

All men have tasted defeat—the successful ones are those who refused to swallow it, thinks Fred Bilveu.

Don't sprinkle salt on the tail of temptation, suggests a friend.

A fat man usually selects the sort of an overcoat that leaves no doubt about it, says an observer.

Some people "know" and others merely state their "opinions." It is much easier to live with the latter.

The radio eliminates distance. But it still is too imperfect to eliminate platitudes from the speeches.

Frank Bartu says some men are born unfortunate and others buy used cars.

Now that the skirts are longer how are we to know that the poor girls have knees.

Panhandlers are warned by authorities that they must go to work or leave New York. But a lot of them own property there.

who deserves votes usually is the one who does not get them.

Poverty is the mother and father of many efforts which have done much for the world.

"The light of my life has gone out," said the jilted one, "but I've struck another match."

Men learn their first lessons in the kindergarten—their last lessons in court, says a victim.

As long as a salesman continues to send in a satisfactory line of orders the "old man" isn't likely to worry much about the kind of pleasure to which he turns.

A Scio woman says too many women look on their husbands as mere automobiler accessories.

An old maid suggests that you buy your chaperone a pair of O'Sullivan's. They'll save her seven thousand shocks a day.
