Oregon Made Home Knitting Yarns

A great surprise for the home knitters of Oregon, but still a fact. Furthermore, this yarn is absolutely virgin wool yarn; the wool was grown in Linn county, sold by Mr. Sellers to the Oregon Worsted Company (mills located at Sellwood), made into worsted yarn by Roy T. Bishop, son of C. P. Bishop, proprietor of the Woolen Mill Store of Salem. Oregon knitters try this yarn out. All colors. 45c per ball of 2 ozs. Samples sent on application. Address C. P. Bishop, Box 75, Salem, Oregon.

Bible Thought Today

The Helping Hand—Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.—Galatians 6:2.

A failure is merely an ordinary man who thinks the big ones get by because of luck.

We do not insist on abolishing the House of David, all that we ask is that they get rid of Dave.

Do those who practice long distance runs for groceries, dry goods and hardware ever win any honors or any money? Who pays for the gas and the unnecessary purchases?

Communities grow in proportion to the support given them by their residents. You cannot boost your city by trading elsewhere or placing business in other localities which could be placed at home.

We told you so! The horse is coming back! Gov. Pierce attended church 30 miles away from Salem, last Sunday, and he went on an army horse at that. Oh, you horse, we knew you would.

FUNNY, ISN'T IT?

Isn't it funny? That a man who thinks he is a business man will get up in the morning from a newspaper advertised mattress, shave with an advertised razor, and put on advertised underwear, advertised shirt, collar, tie and shoes, seat himself at an advertised table and eat advertised breakfast food, drink advertised coffee, put on an advertised hat, light an advertised cigarette, ride to his place of business in an advertised car, seat himself at an advertised desk, in an advertised chair, then turn down a newspaper advertising solicitor on the grounds that advertising don't pay.

AMERICA'S FAVORITE HYMN

"The Etude," a musical magazine, has recently conducted a nation-wide ballot to ascertain the favorite hymn. More than 32,000 nominations were sent in. "Abide With Me" was the leader by a considerable majority. "Nearer My God to Thee" is next. "Lead Kindly Light" is third, "Rock of Ages" fourth, with "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," as the next in order. The referendum was conducted over a very wide range and may be said to be thoroughly representative as indicative of the choice of this country.

In this exhaustive census in which George Ade, Irving Bacheller, William Jennings Bryan, Nicholas Murray Butler, George Chadwick, Dr. Russell H. Conwell, Dr. Frank Crane, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Bishop Warren B. Candler, Chauncey M. Depew, Charles H. Eliot, John Drew, Strickland Gillian, Amelita Galli-Curci, John Luther Long, Thurlow Lieurance, Judge Ben H. H. Rogers, John Phillip Sousa, Henry VanDyke, Owen Wister were among those who participated.

"Abide With Me" was written by the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte (1793-1847) an obscure English parson, a few hours before his death, after administering a final communion service to his parishioners. The music was composed by a well known English organist and composer, William Henry Monk (1823-1889). The hymn second in favor is "Nearer My God to Thee." The words by Sarah Flower Adams and the music by the American musical educator, Lowell Mason (1792-1872). These are the hymns of simple faith, of hope, of reverence.

"Abide with me; fast fall the eventide; The darkness deepens, Lord with me abide, Swift to its close ebb out life's fleeting day— Its glories fade, its kingdoms pass away. Change and decay in all around I see, O Thou who changest not, abide with me."

That is the cry from the heart of reverent America—the appeal of the wanderer lost in the shadow of the approaching long night—bewildered, forsaken by a pride of intellect which perhaps has been a false guide, and abandoned him in the wilderness to the wolves of doubt. Intellect may convince; science may scoff, and the new philosophies seek to destroy and give nothing in place of that they take away—yet despite these the despairing cry is "Abide with me, O Thou who changest not, abide with me!" And those who abandon all other hope and utter that prayer as the lost child in the darkness of the forest calls for its father in the faith that the cry will be heard, will be heard. That song is a prayer, as well as a song; it stirs the profoundest depths of anyone with a spark of reverence left, and is an appeal from mortals helpless at the crossroads of the eternal ways.

Much of the same nature is "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the same of Cardinal Newman's grand hymn and appeal, "Lead, Kindly Light," the second and third selections of the people.

The tremendously persuasive appeal of music, and of hymns such as the three the people have selected, do not seem to be appreciated in these modern days as much as when the congregations were expected to furnish the music by singing hymns. Let a church be all but darkened, let the three hymns be sung which the American people have said are their favorites, and let there be a short, earnest, fervent and reverent prayer, and maybe more people would go to church if such services were more common.

More music, more of the love of the Father, more of the helping hand reaching down out of the infinite, and the message of hope wafted on sweet and solemn music to the wanderers, and there will be more of them to struggle in out of the darkness.
