have requested that persons kindly should not be allowed and said estate disposed towards birds place food settled in their usual haunts. The cold 1923. season is here and with regular supply of food cut off, the birds are now facing the period in which there is great danger of extermination by starvation. Although the songsters have migrated, the ones remaining deserve attention.

A little grain will do much to relieve the birds' distress during the winter, or, if this is to much trouble table crumbs to them will be welcome. Watching the cat will also be appreciated, and this is small enough compensation for services

New Years Greetings From Wesely Grocery

With the year 1923 drawing to a close, we pause for a moment to reflect over another years activity in our business.

We realize that without the support of many loyal friends among whom many of you are numbered, our business would not show a steady and gratifying growth: For this reason we want to express to you our very sincere appreciation for, your valuable patronage and all help that made our store what it is; and at the same time we extend to you our hearty Greetings for a bountiful, prosperous and Happy 1924.

We have always endeavored to serve you, conscentiously and to the best of our ability and intended to continue this policy wereever we can as long as we stay here. We hope, therefore to merit your friendship and patronage in the future.

Again extending you and yours the compliments of the season. Yours Sincerely.

J. F. WESELY, Grocer
