

The Community Club

Last Friday night was the meeting of the Sweet Home Community Club and also of the Open Forum. It is said over 600 people were present, and that over 300 ate supper with the Sweet Home folks. About 75 went out from Albany and 35 or more from Lebanon, while all the other communities were well represented. Scio was represented by that stalwart worker for this community, Leonard Gilkey, and he is surely to be complimented for holding up his end of the county. But he should not be expected to do the work for all of us—he needs some help, at least once in awhile.

The meeting at Crabtree next Monday night will tax that little city to its capacity, and we know Crabtree will rise to the emergency. Scio should not allow the outsiders to outdo her in attendance. Local pride should cause us to be there in large numbers. We can and must keep Scio to the forefront—not to take advantage of other communities, but to hold our own with them.

A committee was appointed at Sweet Home to make arrangements for a county picnic, and this committee will no doubt have some sort of report to make at Crabtree. This is something all of us ought to be interested in. Picnics are good for what ails us—lack of acquaintance with our neighbors and community boosters.

Don't forget, then, that Crabtree citizens, the Forks of the Santiam Community Club and the Linn County Open Forum invite you to come to Crabtree next Monday night and get acquainted with the men and women behind the community club work—they are all likable people and worth while in making their acquaintance.

Drastic Quarantine

The state Livestock board has issued a letter to cattle, sheep, and hog men that is remindful of the seriousness of the hoof and mouth disease, and among other things says: "In the drastic proposal we are submitting to you, we want you to understand the motive; it is to protect the livestock industry of Oregon that we are asking you to cooperate in this requirement and to make it certain every plant shall cooperate, we are making this quarantine order:

"All sheep shearers, farm laborers, dairy laborers, farm and ranch and stock-yard help in general coming from the state of California into the state of Oregon, unless able to furnish affidavit evidence that they have not been in any district infected with foot and mouth disease, shall be required to either discard, wash in boiling water, or subject all of their clothing to a four (4) parts of 40 per cent formalin solution bath (U.S.P.) to each one hundred (100) parts of water and their shoes and shearing equipment to official disinfection. Certificates of disinfection shall be required of all farm laborers coming from California."

Timely Warning

The state veterinarian sends out some pertinent reminders, which we publish below, and which should be strictly adhered to while the hoof and mouth disease is so prevalent in California:

Don't let outside people from unknown districts and California visit your herd.

Don't employ laborers from California. Require all to disinfect their shoes and wash their clothes.

Don't give credence to rumors. If foot and mouth disease appears it will be in your dairy paper.

Don't repeat rumors, it hurts your state, but get your information from authentic sources.

Don't get panicky or excited. The infection is now one hundred miles farther away than two months ago. There is safety in distance and the disease centers are now known. The spread existed in California two months before they knew about it. We did not get it then, we should not get it now. Be careful but be calm.

Some people are saying that there will be many wells go dry this summer because of the shortage of rainfall during the winter. Anyhow, the ground at this early season shows the need of rain, and lots of it.

J. S. Sticha went to Portland last Saturday to witness the ball games. He remained over Sunday and took in the double-header. He says Portland won the game Saturday and one of the series Sunday.

Miss Elsie Limbeck and mother, Prof. and Mrs. Ramsey were business visitors in Albany last Saturday.

Program Receives Impetus

On Wednesday night, April 23, large delegations from practically every part of Linn county met at Lebanon for the purpose of talking over roads and a road building program. N. M. Newport of Lebanon presided.

W. J. Culver, road superintendent and engineer of Marion county was an invited guest, and he read a paper on how roads of solid construction had been built in his county. He said a few years ago the county court of Marion county asked representative citizens to come together and talk over how best to build good roads, with the result that some 100 miles of hard surfaced roads have been built to date, with no more to build this year. He said the people themselves worked out the plan and designated the places where the roads were needed the worst, and the county court had carried out the recommendations. It was a most able paper and showed that the author was conversant with road building in all its branches. And the best of it is, there has been no scandal connected with the road building in Marion county. Mr. Culver was ably backed by his colleague, Commissioner J. T. Hunt of Marion county.

Roy Klein, state highway engineer, was also present, and he gave much valuable information on road building. He said no macadamized road could ever stand up under heavy traffic, especially in congested centers, and said when this happened it is always cheaper to stand the first cost for hard-surfaced roads. He also emphasized that when the Roosevelt highway is completed and the road crossing the mountains via Cascadia is a fact, both will be an asset to the Willamette valley and the entire state of Oregon.

Many of the delegates from all over the county spoke upon the question of roads for the county that are passable the year around. A few were in for starting construction work now, but others thought it best to wait until a positive program is worked out, and then only build as we get the money. To build as we get the money is the sensible idea, for then the taxpayer will not be burdened with interest bearing bonds, which could and would go into road building. Commissioner Thoms suggested that a 2 mill tax each year would build at least three miles of hard-surfaced roads, and it is quite probable that this will be adopted as a part of the road building program.

E. D. Myers, J. S. Sticha and D. C. Thoms represented Scio at the meeting, and they feel that some real constructive work was done. In common with most people, the local representatives think that the day of bond-issuing, with its interest-bearing coupons, only tends to make a wanted article cost twice its original value, and is usually worn out by the time the last bond is paid.

From any angle we view it, the road question, next to the plight of the farmer, is the biggest problem with which the people have to contend. And to meet this problem, it will take a lot of real honest-to-goodness thought—and this is being given to the question in no uncertain manner.

WHAT IS PROPER PASTEURIZATION OF MILK

A raw beef steak and a bottle of raw milk are two of the finest food substances but it is not safe to consume either of them in that condition.

We all understand that raw beef steak should be made safe by cooking but we have not all come to realize that precisely the same sanitary reasons which deter us from serving raw beef steak to our children should prevent us from giving them raw milk. Raw milk should be made safe by the application of heat.

Fortunately we like the flavor of cooked meat but unfortunately we do not like the flavor of boiled milk. Therefore the home treatment of raw milk so as to make it safe and at the same time preserve its delightful flavor is a difficult undertaking.

Close observation has shown that the cooked taste begins to appear when milk is held for some time at or above 145 degrees F. Accordingly the problem of preparing a safe and palatable milk is one of determining the proper exposure at or below 145 degrees F. required to make milk entirely safe.

The studies of Dr. Theobald Smith of Harvard Medical School, of Professors Russel and Hastings of the University of Wisconsin, and of Dr. M. J. Rosenau of the U. S. Public Health Service have all agreed that milk is made safe by holding it at 140 degrees F. for fifteen minutes.

Because in the heat treatment of milk we are safeguarding human life, it is customary to heat milk to at least 142 degrees F. for at least thirty minutes thus giving a margin of 150 per cent. Such heat treatment will unquestionably destroy any disease germs which may have found their way into it and will render the milk safe.
