THURSDAY, July 3, 1924

Haying is about over and the farmer will have a short breathing spell before harvest begins.

Tomorrow is the Fourth of July, the 148th birthday of our nation. Take the day off, go to Richardson Gap, Stayton, Jefferson, or some place—but celebrate.

Eight pages this week. If you like our paper and our style, tell your friends about us and have 'em subscribe. All the news we hear of in this community is given each week, and the paper is worth more than we ask—$1.75 the year.

Last week we lied—not deliberately—about a dentist coming to Scio. This dentist had phoned and written J. F. Wesely that his household goods would arrive on Tuesday and he and family on Wednesday, but they didn't. No word was received after that until Friday night, when a letter said he had found a better location. Hence we lied, but couldn't help it.

That was a great democratic love feast in Albany the other night, the occasion being the honoring of three of Linn county's prominent sons—Jefferson Myers, state treasurer; Judge O. P. Coshaw, supreme court; Milton A. Miller, candidate for United States senator. It was a great gathering, speeches and food were in abundance and eagerly delivered and devoured. Linn county ought to be proud of these native sons, and is.

Trade at home when you can, and you can, but when you can't find what you want at home, we recommend the advertisers in this paper. We use common sense in accepting advertising with the idea of giving our many readers a wide range of selection of merchants with whom to make purchases from and who will give the utmost quality for the price. Always patronize Tribune advertisers and tell them where you saw their ad.

The democratic national convention has proved itself composed of men whose personal beliefs are of more importance than the problems confronting the nation. More stress has been put upon the Ku Kux Klan than that organization warrants, and the booze fellows have tried to get the convention to go on record favoring light wines and beer, thus making the entering wedge for the return of the brewery and distillery and eventually the saloon. The former thrives on attacks and the latter is a dead issue, so there has been no forward step taken—just a look backward. The league of nations plank was defeated, thus detouring from a well beaten path, and the only thing that has been cared for as of old is the condemnation of the republican party for its scandals—and justly. There has been nothing new emanating from the democratic national convention.

Several of the county papers are making from 50 to 75 per cent reductions in subscription rates for a short time, in the hopes their list will be inoculated with new life and their money box made heavier with a few "iron" dollars. The Tribune is enjoying a steady growth in additions to its list and advertising columns, and attributes this success to giving the news of the community and boosting. No paper can be successfully printed for less than $2.00 per year, and every publisher knows it. To do so, some other means of financing the publication must be found. No other business in any community is done on so small a margin of profit as is the newspaper business. We have tried the reduction and we know it does not bring the desired result—just more worry and more interest on more borrowed money to meet the paper and rent bills. We prefer to give the news and in that way hold the old and get new subscribers.

Here's Some Figures

With Ford car No. 10,000,000 now in service and making a transcontinental trip from New York to Chicago over the Lincoln highway, the man who enjoys figuring can have a world of practice.

The other day one gifted gentleman worked out the tire problem. He figured that the 40,000,000 tires used on the 10,000,000 Fords, if stacked up, would make a rubber column 2000 miles high.

Then, looking for road trouble, he punctured each of those tires, and then figured that one man working eight hours a day except Sundays and holidays and repairing a tire every five minutes would finally finish the job in 400 years.

Oregon Suits Me

I have lived in old Missouri,
In that good old show-me state,
Where they feed you on corn
dodgers

Buttermilk and sweet potatoes,
I have lived way out in Kansas,
On the broad and rolling plain—
But Oregon suits me.

I have lived in Minnesota,
'Mid her lakes of azure blue,
Where the weather in the winter
Has a trend of freezing you.
I have lived among the corn fields
Of the state of Iowa—
But Oregon suits me.

I have lived in Old Virginia,
And in sunny Tennessee;
I have roamed about the country,
and have crossed the rolling sea.
The state of California
Has some wondrous sights to see—
But Oregon suits me. —Ex

Make Good Catch

J. S. Stieha, Lawrence Montgomery Otto Lyons, and Rolla Shelton went up on Canyon creek above Cascadia Saturday evening and remained over Sunday fishing. They report that they each caught 60 fish.

They drove from Scio to Cascadia in two hours and seven minutes and say that the road to Cascadia is in good shape.

Real Summer Weather

This section of the valley has experienced some scorching weather the last few days. Thermometers in different locations and at different hours are reported to have registered from 98 to 110 degrees.

This being an unusually dry season it looks as though we are to have a hot summer.

His Name Linked
With Washington's

Lafayette Will Ever Be Remembered as Defender of Liberty.

The memory of Marquis de Lafayette, French patriot, international hero and America's friend during the stirring days of the Revolutionary war, will endure while the nation lives.

Lafayette was born September 6, 1757, in Auvergne, France. He was left an orphan at thirteen years, inheriting a vast fortune. He spurned the life of a courtier, despite his wealth, and chose to be a soldier, subjecting himself to the severest training. When scarcely eighteen years old, the struggles of the thirteen American colonies came to his notice. He was then a captain at the French garrison of Metz. Arriving in America, he is quoted as having said:

"As the defender of that liberty which I adore, free myself beyond all others, coming as a friend to offer my services to this most interesting republic, I bring with me nothing but my own free heart, no ambition to fulfill and no selfish interest to serve. The happiness of America is intimately connected with the happiness of all mankind; it is destined to become the safe and venerable asylum of virtue, of honesty, of tolerance, of equality and of peaceful liberty."

Every American boy and girl who has studied history knows how Lafayette bought and secretly equipped a vessel named the Victory, his long voyage across the Atlantic, his landing and his tedious journey of 900 miles to Philadelphia, the seat of American government at that time. His services were accepted by congress and, on General Washington's recommendation, he was appointed to command a division. In the winter of 1777 and 1778 he shared with Washington the hardships of Valley Forge. Lafayette returned to France in 1779 and persuaded the French government to send ships and troops. More than 5,000 soldiers and a fleet of seven ships came to the aid of the colonies. The fleet was commanded by the Comte de Rochambeau.

Under the leadership of Washington, Lafayette and Rochambeau marshaled all troops to Yorktown, where the siege culminated on October 19, 1781. In the surrender of Cornwallis with 8,000 men, 800 sailors, 214 guns and 24 flags. Thus the war was won. It was Lafayette who refused to advance and crush Cornwallis until Washington was present to command the final victory.

Kosciuszko's Services

American history chronicles the value of Kosciuszko's services for the land of Washington. "His bit" was one great record of achievements which yet remain to be unfolded to the great American public.

Too little has been written of the services rendered by Kosciuszko in the American Revolution. Perhaps at a later day, when the United States and Poland will become more intimately related to each other, Thaddeus Kosciuszko will stand out in this country as one of the great American national heroes.
