

July 4th Is Upon Us

and to make the day one of profit and pleasure, as well as a relief from tiresome toil, let everybody in the community join in the exercises at Richardson Gap on that day. A glorious time in a quiet way is in store for us if we all make it our pleasure to help make others happy.

Join hands with Ora Zink in his Public Sale on the 12th if you have anything to sell. It will only cost you the regular per cent to the auctioneer. See his ad in another column.

Mr. Farmer:

If you have any wheat to sell before harvest, bring it in.

We are asking your cooperation and support in developing a larger and better mill to serve this section of Linn county.

We are prepared to handle all the grain raised within hauling distance of the mill, and will guarantee the top market price at all times, and we ask you to get our bid before selling elsewhere. We will pay a premium above the market for the choicest milling wheat this season.

We are here to serve you.

"People's Day"

In the early years of the republic, when Independence day was celebrated with great enthusiasm, the Fourth of July was people's day at the White House, and old and young, rich and poor, went to pay their respects to the President and his family, and to partake of refreshments in the "President's house." New Year receptions were also given to the general public even then, but it was on the Fourth of July and not the first day of the year that the President held his most democratic court. The mansion was thrown open to all alike, that the people might enjoy the nation's hospitality and rub elbows with the distinguished public men and statesmen who helped to make their laws and who then as now spoke to them from the stump and made rival bids for their votes in coming elections.
