Those who are in a "run-down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

THURSDAY, Jan. 1, 1925

This is 1925. May you be happy and prosperous the whole year is the sincere wish of the publishers of the Scio Tribune.

On Monday, Jan. 12, the state legislature meets. As usual nothing will be done until the 35th day of the session, and in the closing hours misfit laws will be passed.

The warm rains of Saturday and Sunday removed the snow and ice and our climate is again normal. If the weather man wants our continued friendship he will not send us any more zero weather.

C. S. Jackson, owner of the Oregon Journal, died at his home in Portland last Saturday after a long illness. His life was simple and the last sad rites were in keeping with his life. Oregon has lost a booster and the newspaper fraternity a true friend.

Last week the "Rural Enterprise" came to our desk from Halsey. For a moment we thought Halsey had become metropolitan and grown to such proportions that it could support two papers, but such a thought proved an error. Just why the editor changed the name from Halsey Enterprise to Rural Enterprise was not given in a lengthy editorial, further than to state that he was carrying out plans he had in mind at the time he purchased the paper three years ago. From the standpoint of community building and keeping Halsey to the front, the dropping of the name of the town and substituting the word "Rural," will have a tendency to build over the years it took to establish the Halsey Enterprise. The same policy to be carried on under the new name could have been handled more successfully under the old name. However, Bro. Wheeler, may your every hope be more than doubled.
