MUST PULL TOGETHER

Most of the industries of the nation are thoroughly organized and they have little worry about ruinous competition. Prices are general in most of the lines. If there is demand enough, trade enough, they will get their profits. When wages, taxes or other expenses increase their production costs, they simply raise the selling price and pass it along. Such is the power of thorough organization.

But one of the nation's biggest industries, agriculture, is not organized, except in spots. The resources of agriculture in this country are inexhaustible. It is a giant industry, on which the prosperity of cities depend, yet it is the poorest industry in all the country—the day laborer is more prosperous in comparison.

And the farmers themselves are largely to blame for this condition. While all other industries have organized for profits, the general farmers continue the same old individual process. When they came to sell they were selling to organizations, not as one organization to another, but as individuals, a farmer here and there, and they sell at the price the organizations set for them.

The business of the world is handled through organizations now and the farmers business is also—as soon as it leaves his hands. The individual farmer stands a poor chance against such odds. He simply competes with his neighbor in helping the middle interests to hold his product prices to cost of production.

Farmers must organize and do business collectively. It is no greater undertaking than the organization of labor, which seemed almost impossible when first undertaken. They must put their own price on their own goods and maintain it. Organized as tightly as other classes, the farmer's business wouldn't be the football it is now for the middle men to kick around.

GET RID OF THE POOR COW

Hoard's Dairyman says that no matter how strongly organized the dairymen of a locality may be, or what the quality of the produce may be, they cannot make a profit with low producing cows. It is just as logical to keep low producing cows as it is for the creamery owners to hold that milk and cream grading is impracticable.

FOLLOWING BIG BUSINESS.

Illinois farmers have organized and are carrying their own auto insurance at 18 cents per $100. Already the organization has over 10,000 policy holders. The membership is limited to farmer organizations and their immediate families. The low rate makes it a very popular organization. And up in Saskatchewan the cooperative hail insurance association has 50,000 farmer members; carries $25,000,000 policies per year at a low rate, and last year its premiums were $290,000, its losses $153,000 and surplus $178,000. It has a reserve of $1,600,000 and the management states as this surplus increases it will be possible to materially reduce the present rates.

SEND IN YOUR NAME

Boy Falls Thirty Feet

(Too late for last week)

Wednesday afternoon Bobby Knizer, the seven year old son of Mrs. Maude Rahn, fell off of the flume of the Thomas Creek Lumber Co. near Ed Bilyeu's place three miles east of town. He was brought to town and is at the Scio hotel where Dr. Prill is attending him. An x-ray did not show any broken bones. It cannot yet be determined whether there are internal injuries. The flume at this point is about 30 feet high.

A moonshiner, a bootlegger and a robber—three of a kind—sawed their way out of the county jail Saturday night, July 4. Of the three crimes there is not much difference, but we believe the latter is more honorable. At any rate he only robs you of your property, while the former robs you of your health and life.

Halted Guns to Save Heroic Mother Bird

One day during the World war I was taking a battery of artillery along a grassy road, a writer in London Tit-Bits relates. The horses were trotting, and behind them the guns rumbled and swayed over ruts and stones. Suddenly there appeared not fifty yards in front of the leading horses a dozen fluffy brown partridge "cheepers," tiny miles no bigger than sparrows, running hither and thither in the wildest panic before the approaching danger. With them was the mother bird. She chivvied them off into the grass on either side of the road, and then, when the last one had made its escape, turned and with open beak and half-spread wings faced the battery, daring them to come on. Had the battery not been halted the bird would have given her life in an endeavor to ensure the safety of her chicks. As it was, she achieved her object by a display of real heroism in the face of hopeless odds.

This is a typical example of the way nature makes heroines of animal mothers, no matter how timid they may be when they have no family to care for. In defence of their helpless young, nature's heroines will face any creature that threatens their safety.

Species Unchanged for Eight Million Years

The longest pedigree in the world so far as science can discover belongs to the "sphenedon," which can boast an ancestry of eight million years duration. The sphenedon is found on a tiny island off the coast of New Zealand. There is nothing quite like it anywhere else. The sphenedon is a reptile and is a mixture of crocodile, snake, turtle, and lizard. As a matter of fact, it is probably the ancestor of all these creatures, but in the process of evolution through countless ages, the "children" have altered and split up into a hundred and one different "families." The sphenedon, however, has gone on its way unchanged and is exactly as it was eight million years ago. This pheristic creature shows greatest similarity to the lizard. It has four short legs and a long tail. Its face is rather like that of a fish and there is a hard ridge on the top of its head and down its back. The dinosaur and other prehistoric animals are of quite recent date compared with the sphenedon. It is generally supposed that the dinosaur disappeared off the earth a mere three million years ago!
