The Tribune, $1.75 the year.

With the grand jury reporting a no true bill against 15-year-old Johnnie Schwindt, the lad was immediately freed from the county jail, having been confined there since Nov. 4 to Dec. 2. Johnnie now has an opportunity to make good, with no restraint upon him by the exactions of law, and we hope he will. Let the people, especially his neighbors, give him every encouragement. The crime was bad, and probably justifiable, and all of us can help keep the lad straight by being kind to him and forgetting the past in his young life.

Next Monday Night

The Santiam Fish and Game Protective and Propagating Association will hold its annual meeting on Monday, Dec. 14, at the city hall, Albany, Oregon, at 7 p. m. A big reindeer feed will be on the menu and this, together with the fact that it is the time for the election of officers, reports of the past year's activities, should make this the event of the year for the sportsmen of Linn county and western Oregon.

Reels of motion pictures that have never been shown in this section will be shown during the evening. It is planned to have present State Game Warden E. F. Averill and members of the State Game Commission.

All phases of game and their protection and propagation will be discussed and also a tentative program for a five years' plan of restocking the Santiam and Calapooia watersheds with fish and game will be presented and discussed with the hope it may be adopted and then supported by the entire sporting fraternity.

All interested in this work are urgently invited to be present and cooperate with the Association in making it one of value to the entire section directly served by its activities. The Association feels that in obtaining a trout hatchery on Roaring River, and in having actively furthered the fish and game program in Linn and adjoining counties that it is entitled to your support and encouragement.

OREGONIAN GOING GOOD

Seventy-five Years of Constructive Usefulness Is Its Lot

No better epitaph was ever written of a newspaper than the celebration held last Friday by the Oregonian commemorating the 75th year of its existence as a newspaper in the best city in the best state of the whole 48 states.

The publishers of the Oregonian have an undisputed right to exult in its achievements. The paper has done more to build up Oregon and the Pacific northwest than any other influence, and as its territory expanded, so has the influence of the Oregonian; unlike most publications, it grows better with age.

Indeed, the Oregonian has been blessed with having able men at the editorial helm, who have been leaders and molders of thought and progress. May its influence for good ever keep bright.

Stuck in the Mud

Last Wednesday, while taking a truck load of supplies to the Crown Mine, N. I. Morrison had a world of trouble. Shortly after leaving Mehana he became stuck and had to unload, and had to carry the stuff about a hundred yards, but fortunately he had help in the persons of Rudolph Wesely, Wm. Young, Arnold Zysset and Murrell Gilkey. In returning, and about two miles this side of the mine, he ran off the narrow gravelled road with two wheels and mired to the axles. He and Mr. Young tussled with the mishap for about two hours, and after a rail had broken and Mr. Morrison had met with a hard jolt on the face from it, they went to the Silver King mine and staid over night. Next morning Zysset and Gilkey came to their rescue and helped them out of their trouble. Mr. Morrison, Mr. Young and the truck arrived home about noon Thursday, the former's face being badly swollen.

Each subscriber renewing his subscription at $1.75 (the regular price), with an additional 25c, can have the Scio Tribune sent one full year to some one who is not a subscriber to it now--no renewals will be accepted at the 25c rate.
