LETTER GOT THERE

SHE didn't have Santa Claus' address, but she knew that Aunt Mary must have it, so she wrote the following letter to him and sent it in care of "Aunt Mary, New York," having first read it to her mother:

"Dear Santa Claus:
"I hope you are well. Are you? Won't you have to come this year in your airplane, or your automobile? Here is my list:

"Too teddy bears in dresses. A doll's writing desk. A doll, not a girl doll. A doll's house (it is in the corner bookshop that is kept by Miss Sinclair). One bear brown and the other white, I think that is all. Your loving friend."

The letter must have arrived, for the presents did.—C. G. Hazard.

Grandmother Compares

Present With Long Ago

JENNY and her great-grandmother were having a little chat while they waited for the announcement from the maid that Christmas dinner was ready. Grandma Smith had been born and reared in the South. She was spending the holidays with her daughter in the North. Grandmother was in her early nineties, but a remarkable woman for her age. Tall, erect, spry, she would never grow old mentally for she was too progressive in her thinking.

"Jenny, as I looked around the house just now, I couldn't help but realize what a difference a generation or two has made in our mode of living. I couldn't keep from comparing this day and home with a Christmas Day and home I knew long ago. You know, Jenny, Andrew and I were married on one Christmas, years ago. Andrew built a little cabin on a plot of ground he owned. It was perched up on a hill. I thought it was the loveliest, most beautiful cabin ever built in the whole world. And it was. It was the last word in cozy, home architecture of the times. Inside it had a dirt floor and a few pieces of hickory furniture which Andrew had made. I wove all the linens and other cloth which we used. We were so happy. We had a big home wedding. One of my wedding presents was a tin cup. That cup was a prized possession, much talked about and envied by my neighbors. Sometimes I wonder, we lived so simply—and happily—and now how complex are—"

The dinner gong boomed forth a welcome sound. The family gathered and with joyful chattering hurried in to the festively arranged Christmas dinner table.—Eleanor E. King.

White Christmas Trees

To prepare white Christmas trees take branches of evergreen of desired size and dip in thick starch to which a small box of borax has been added and while trees are still damp sprinkle each with artificial snow. The trees when dry may be placed in pots or baskets and the top of earth covered with moss. A larger tree may be made to glitter with artificial snow by sprinkling it on while the branches are moistened with glue. Tufts of cotton and glass icicles may be used for trimming.

For Golfing Friend

For one's golfing friend, a nice gift would be a small score pad in a leather wrist strap. It provides a space for keeping one's own score, that of the opponent, and the number of holes played.

Test

"He has proposed, but does he really love me?"
"Wait and see what he sends you for Christmas, girlie. Then give him your answer."

Christmas Eve Bread

According to an old superstition, bread baked on Christmas Eve will never become moldy.

Named From God of Sleep

Morphia or morphine is an alkaloid of opium, discovered by Serturner in 1803. It is a powerful narcotic and is used in medicine to alleviate pain. In large doses it is a deadly poison. As it induces sleep it was called morphine from Morpheus, the name of the god of sleep in the ancient Latin mythology.

Not Proven

D. L. thinks he has proved his case against a Scot having a sense of humor because he told four jokes to a Scot without getting a single smile. Before accepting this evidence, we want to hear those jokes.—London Tit-Bits.

Child Welfare in England

England is giving increasing attention to child welfare work since the war, there being 2,112 maternity and child welfare centers in that country today. Thirty additional centers are under consideration. The increase in the last year has been at the rate of 25 a month.
