

THE COUNTY PROHIBITORY CONVENTION.

This convention met at Albany on the 14th inst. at 2 P. M., with quite a good delegation from most all the organized precincts.

Col. Woodford, of Illinois, being present was called upon and addressed the convention, at considerable length. In the course of Mr. Woodford's remarks he took occasion to expose the silly twaddle of the Oregonian, in which that paper continues to stultify itself before an enlightened public, by declaring in the face of the most convincing testimony to the contrary, that prohibition don't prohibit.

Each citizen of Oregon has an interest in the whole state. It is not for a whisky-loving Portlander to forbid a law by which the rest of the state may be rid of the liquor evil.

Report of committee on credentials was read recommending that Dr. G. F. Crawford and D. P. Porter were entitled to seats in this convention, was adopted.

P. H. Webb moved that a committee of three be appointed to nominate an executive committee. Peter Hume of Brownsville, moved to amend by adding the name of the president to such committee. Motion prevailed.

The president appointed A. M. Acheson, Peter Hume and B. H. Irvine as such committee.

The chairman called R. Robe to the chair.

Moved by A. M. Acheson, and carried, that the committee appointed to nominate an executive committee, be requested to report in ten minutes.

A YOUNG WIFE DEAD.

Babe in Arms, She is Shot Down by Her Husband, who then Shoots Himself. Particulars of the Sad Tragedy.

On Thursday night of last week, about 9 o'clock, a most sickening tragedy was enacted near McCoy, about twelve miles west of Salem on the western division of the Oregon & California railroad. Oscar M. Kelly, son of J. D. Kelly, a well-to-do and highly respectable farmer of Polk county, shot and instantly killed his wife Clara, and then attempted his own life, under the following circumstances:

In September, 1884, Oscar M. Kelly married Clara Glandon at Amity, in Polk county, she being a daughter of F. S. Glandon, and old and highly respectable resident of Polk county, who formerly, with his family, was a resident of Salem, where they are well known. The issue of the marriage was two boys, one about 22 and the other 8 months old. After their marriage the couple moved to Albany, where Kelly had secured employment as a clerk in one of the stores in that place. He soon began to drink to excess, and neglected his wife and home to such an extent that she concluded to return to her father's home, and permanently separate herself from her husband. Kelly afterwards frequently tried to persuade her to live with him again, but as he still continued in his drinking habits and showed no evidence that he would treat her otherwise than in the abusive which led her to leave him, she refused to leave her father's house. He several times tried to force her to return to him, but he was always unsuccessful.

On Tuesday Kelly came down from Albany and went to the house of his father, between McCoy and Zena. He made no attempt to see his wife until the evening of the tragedy, being engaged meantime in buying wool for a San Francisco and Albany firm at Dallas and other towns of Polk county.

While at Perrydale he found out that his wife was at her father's home, and in the evening he called at Glandon's about 9 o'clock, the family having retired, and knocked loudly and asked to see Clara. She came to the door and invited Kelly into the parlor. She wore a loose flowing gown, and bore here babe in her arms.

After her husband entered the following conversation, overheard by a hired who slept overhead, ensued: "Will you live with me, Clara?"

"No, I won't." "Why not? You was just 'yere!" Kelly whipped out a revolver, and two pistol shots in quick succession followed, and a heavy body fell to the floor.

Mrs. Glandon was first to reach the parlor door, and the sight that met her eyes was one that was enough to freeze her blood with horror. Lying upon the floor, weltering in her blood, with her child clasped convulsively to her breast, lay Mrs. Kelly, murdered by her husband. Close by, on his knees, was Kelly, who had evidently directed the second shot at himself, with one hand on his forehead, and the other in his hair, as if trying to rise, while the other gasped a 44-caliber revolver, which he pointed at his mother-in-law, but lacking strength to fire the weapon his arm dropped nerveless by his side.

Mrs. Glandon fled, taking with her her 18-year-old daughter, who had meantime arrived upon the scene. When Kline, the hired man, entered the room, Kelly had fled, and the murdered woman lay just where she was, with her arms around her babe, with her hands clasped as in the act of praying.

The ball had entered on the left side of the head, just above the ear, passing through the brain and then striking directly downward and lodging in the left breast, just above the nipple. From the direction which it took it appeared that she had dropped with her head on its entrance to her husband not to murder her. The hair on the child's head was burned by powder, and the bullet barely missed it. Its face also bears powder marks.

THE SEARCH FOR KELLY. News of the murder spread rapidly, and a crowd gathered around the house, and the search for Kelly began. He was traced through the barn and dew-wet grass, and early in the morning was found at a neighbor's Mr. Alexander, about a mile and a quarter from the scene of the murder, and within a half a mile of his father's house. He was lying upon a sofa before a fire, and upon beholding his pursuers he loudly exclaimed: "It will all be over in a few minutes, boys."

It was found that Kelly was badly wounded, the bullet having entered the left breast, near the nipple, and lodged just under the shoulder blade. His wound is a bad one, but he will probably recover. A physician afterwards probed for the bullet but could not locate it.

Kelly was weak and nervous, and when asked why he committed the murder he could only respond: "I do not know." He is 28 years of age, and was born at present home of his father. His deceased wife was 22 years old.

Effort has been made to find the pistol, but so far the search has been fruitless. The murderer purchased his cartridges at Perrydale, and in the morning at McCoy called upon Railroad Agent Graves and asked to be allowed to enter the depot where his trunk was. From the trunk he took the pistol, loaded it, and fired one chamber from the depot platform to see if he was loaded properly. This was about 8 o'clock. Then he went and committed the fearful deed.

Coroner Kirpatrick was called and held an inquest, and the verdict of the jury was in accordance with the foregoing facts.

People sympathize entirely with the woman, and nothing but Kelly's respectable connection and hitherto good reputation save his neck. A guard has been placed over him at his home, where his wants are being attended to.

The Good Times Have Reached Lebanon.

Montague's sales for each during the past week were unprecedentedly large—nearly double what they were on the same date in June any time during the past fifteen years. Good goods at a low price, prices' ink and lots of free advertising may account for it. I am steeling up constantly with fresh goods, notably in summer-wear goods—ladies, Misses and children's shoes, jewelry in endless variety, white for gentlemen, boys and children. I am getting an elegant line of clothing, hats, caps, the "Boss Boot," warranted, plow shoes and dress shoes, cheap, stylish and durable. These goods were bought for each, at very low rates, and will be sold without regard to the large prices usually charged by other houses for inferior goods.

"The friends then last, and their adoption trip, grapple them to thy son with looks of steel."

Montague has just hosts of friends, and the way they rally around his establishment buying their supplies of him, rejoices the heart of the old gentleman, who feels that his labors among the good people of Lebanon and vicinity for the past fifteen years is most kindly appreciated. As Montague is here to stay, it will be to his interest, as well as yours, to give you full value for your money every time. Always go to Montague's for your supplies.

Montague has no desire to control the entire business of Lebanon, and will make no frontal assault towards that end. He proposes to let his competitors manage their business in their own way. He will buy his goods at the very lowest rates when he has the cash to pay for them, and if he does sell lower than others, remember that he sells exclusively for cash, and those who buy from him will not have to pay their credit a ever had debts, which, unfortunately, credit giving houses too often make. Look over his stock and get his prices.

"Hang out your banner on the outer wall. The cry is, still they come!"

New customers are being added daily to Montague's already large list of patrons. They buy their supplies at his mammoth Cash store and go away satisfied, as his goods are first-class in every respect, while his prices are much lower than his competitors.

Montague intended to say a few words this week about attempted conspiracies and chronic kickers, but he will desist for the present.

There is a certain old family who, for many, many centuries has used for its motto the words—"CAVE, AUCUM." Construe them as you like.

With the kindest wishes for his friends, and a stern defiance to his foes, Montague will continue at the old stand dispensing his goods at the lowest living rates, knowing well that buyers will go where they can do the best, and where they are sure of getting 100 cents' worth for a dollar, every time. Drop in and see him.

I have no patent on my style of advertising; neither do I advertise myself as a "Leader." Remember this: "The great heart of the world is just." I am satisfied, and profoundly thankful for the people's verdict.

The World Type-Writer

WHAT IS IT? The Machine Answers for Itself.

A Machine to do the Work of the Pen. If you write much or little, you need a Type-Writer, costing you but $10 that will do your work much better than a machine for which you will pay $100.00.

Pen writing is slow and tiresome. It wastes time, and thus is money, no matter what your occupation. The continued use of the pen exhausts body and mind.

The pen cannot keep pace with thoughts. Often the best are lost. The mind becomes clogged, the power of rapid composition remains undeveloped, and your written productions lack the brilliancy of extemporaneous speech. Time, health and the highest capabilities are too valuable to be wasted. Hence the demand for a rapid and easy writing machine. After many attempts success has been attained in

The World Type-Writer, which embodies the fundamental principles of writing machines, and embraces patented devices which are believed to be essential to the construction of a successful and practical type-writer. It is the result of costly experimenting, and is the nearest approach to perfection for the money it costs, which has yet been produced. It successfully meets the demand, and is ready to supply that demand and prove to the people that the World Type-Writer is mightier than the pen, as the "pen is mightier than the sword." You can buy one from me for Ten Dollars, ($10.00) and make yourself and family happy. Call and see them work, if you do not wish to buy one. They are on exhibition at my Jewelry store,
