BLACK BIRCH WOOD. Its Use For Ornamental Purposes Highly Recommended. Three years ago, the writer built a dwelling house in the country. In selecting the woods for the interior of the house, his attention was called to some doors the builder had put into a house he had just finished for himself.

Subsequently, an interview with the architect resulted in getting him to go and see the house finished with black birch used for the inside trimmings. He admitted looking very well; but then he had never heard of birch being used before for any such purpose, and he had grave misgivings as to the result of the experiment if the birch was adopted. But without further argument, the architect consented to a trial of the new wood, and it was introduced into the wainscoting, doors and fireplace of the dining-room, and it was admitted to the paper designer.

Persons who may not know the nature and color of black birch after dressing and polishing may be interested in knowing that the grain of the wood is very close, the color mottled and slightly darker than satin-wood. Black birch makes beautiful furniture, and its sweet luster is a decided advantage over the maple. The wood is very close, the color mottled and slightly darker than satin-wood.

HELEN JACKSON. Boundless and Genuine Admiration for Physical Perfection. No one loved beauty more than she; no one could depreciate the body more when it began to lose its freshness. For strong young men in their prime, for blooming girls and mature women, she had an admiration as frank almost as unqualified as a Greek's. Her very admiration of physical beauty made her peculiarly sensitive to the action and the dismal accompaniments of sickness. In her own case, when accident brought infirmity upon her, it was received at first with a shudder of disgust, a kind of quick impulsive scorn, of which, perhaps, only no-natures are capable. She spoke of her illness as a "career of disgrace."

FATHER ANDERLEDDY. The New Jesuit General's Career, and His Stay in the United States. "Just inside the door of the parlour of a Fraternity at the mere mention of whose name—that of Jesus—every head is forced to bow!" This exclamation was uttered some three hundred years ago by Pope Sixtus V., one of the most remarkable Pontiffs who ever sat on the Papal throne, in alluding to the Order of Jesuits—otherwise known as the Company of Jesus. The new general of the company—the twenty-third since its foundation—to whom every member thereof owes the most blind and unquestioning obedience, Father Andlerledy. He was born on the 3d of June, 1819, at Berisal, a little hamlet of the Canton du Valais in Switzerland. He was brought up at the Jesuit College of Brigone, on the slopes of the Simplon, and as soon as he was old enough, began his first novitiate for entering the order. Appointed to a professorship of literature at the immense establishment of the order at Friburg, he soon attracted the attention of his superior. Perceiving that the remarkable talents of this son of a poor Valais peasant might eventually be turned to the great advantage of the order, he was sent to Rome, where he spent some time studying philosophy and theology under the personal supervision of Father (now Cardinal) Pecci.

Without woman? asks the essayist who starts out to say something new on this subject. In the present world, man is more than a mere animal. He is a creature of God, and his mind is capable of more than the brute force of the animal. He is a creature of God, and his mind is capable of more than the brute force of the animal. For Weak Women. Mrs. Lydia K. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. "About the first of September, 1881, my wife was taken with uterine hemorrhage. She had been ill and for a time was entirely deprived of the power of speech. The physicians insisted that she should give up preaching—a severe trial to so eloquent a man—and he now resolved to devote all his abilities to the administrative work of the society. Successively rector of the Jesuit districts of Cologne and Paderborn, he was in 1883 the colleague of Maria Laach, which soon became one of the most renowned establishments of the order. A few years later he was elected a member of the Supreme Council of the Society, and owing to his profound knowledge of the political and religious situation of northern Europe was appointed to the high post of "Assistant for Germany," with jurisdiction over the latter, as well as over Austria, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland and Scandinavia. There are only five of these "assistants" to the general, who are each intrusted with a distinct jurisdiction, and who together with the general's confessor, or "admonisher," constitute the Supreme Council of the order. So remarkable were Father Andlerledy's services in this new branch of administration, and the general's admiration and confidence of his colleagues, that when, in 1883, the advancing years of Father Beckx rendered it necessary to choose a coadjutor to the general, Father Andlerledy was at first ballot almost unanimously elected to fill the office.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END. The beginning of disease is a slight distention or disorder of some of the vital organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dropsical swellings, the liver is troubled, the skin grows tawny and unhealthy looking, there are pains in the right side or through the right shoulder blade. The climax is often an over-prostration of the physical energies, which is a fatal result. But if the remedy is met in time with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is always effective as a remedy, there will be no reason to apprehend those further and more serious diseases. For over thirty years, Dr. J. C. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is a natural and agent in fever and ague, and other malarial complaints, than quinine and other potent drugs, which even when they do prove effectual for a time, ruin the stomach and impair the general health.
