PRESIDENT SADI-CARNOT.

Short Biographical Sketch of the New Chief Executive of France. Marie Francois Sadi-Carnot completed half a century of life August 11, 1887 ilis grandfather was the famous Minis ter of War in the French revolution. His father, M. Lazare Hippolyte Car not, inherited much of the celebrated Carnot's ability, and as a politician participated prominently in many of the stirring episodes which marked the history of France in the second and third quarters of the present century. But the second Carnot was a paradoxi cal combination-advocate, statesman, orator, author, man of affairs and mystic philosopher. He identified himself with the St. Simonians of 1832 and became a profound student of Oriental literature when Enfantin, Roge and Massol went to preach the doctrines of Saint Simon in the East. To this time of mystleism is due the "Sadi" which is hyphenated to the historic name of Sadi-Carnot was educated to the profession of engineer and proved an apt scholar, even if developing none of the active characteristics of his family, and manifesting rather stolidity which was foreign to his house. He was fifth in his class when he entered the Polytechnic School, but soon took the first position and retained it until he graduated in 1863. He was soon afterwards appointed assistant secretary of the Goverument Council of Roads and Bridges. Subsequently he was nominated engineer at Aunecy, in Upper Savoy, and re-mained there until 1871, when, at the fall of the empire, he was summoned to active political life. January 10, 1871, he was appointed Prefect of the Department of the Seine-Inferieure, and was charged with the organization of the national defense in the three departments of the Seine-Inferieure, the Eure and Calvados. That duty was performed with the enthusiasm and thoroughness which was expected from one on whom devolved the task of upholding the traditions of the Carnots.

Carnot, borne by the fourth President

In February of the same year M Sadi-Carnot was elected to the National Assembly from the department of the Cote d'Or and identified himself with the Republican Left, of which he became secretary. Naturally he gave the most earnest support to all laws for the permanent establishment of the Republic. When the Assembly was divided into two branches, in 1876, he was elected deputy from Beaune and was appointed one of the secretaries of the chamber. He made a specialty of public works, more particularly railroads and the promotion of inland navigation, and soon gained a reputa tion as an authority on these subjects He was frequently placed on the Budg et Committee, the training school for young statesmen, and became chairman in 1883.

In December, 1878, be was appointed under secretary of public works, and there gained the intimate acquaintance with the operations of the department which qualified him for the Minister's portfolio, which Ferry gave him on beuing Premier in September, 1880. Gambetta overthrew the Cabinet in November, 1881, and was called to form a ministry, and Sadi-Carnot refired. Brisson gave him the portfolio of public works in April, 1885, and when Debreve met succeeded Brisson as Premier in January, 1886, he retained m in the Cabinet as Minister of Finance. When in December last the Defreveinet ministry fell, the question at Issue was one of economy and the Minister of Finance refused to conform to large reductions in expenditures demanded by the Budget Comaittee. Clemenceau then overthrew DeFreycinet on a vote to sustain Sadi-Carnot's estimates. This is the complete record of the new President's omparatively brief political experi- magic. RACES OF DWARFS.

Notes and Comments on the Subject by A. De Quatrefages. A. De Quatrefages has recently pub-lished an historical review of the ancient and modern reports on dwarfish tribes. While formerly the description of ancient geographers were considered not trustworthy, many of them have been confirmed by recent explorations. Among these are the tales of the pygmies. Aristotle and Pliny state that a dwarfish people lived near the swamps of the upper part of the Nile. De Quat-refages considers this tribe identical with Schweinfurth's Akka, who at the present time live a little further south. Pomponius Mela mentions dwarfs who inhabited the neighborhood of the Red Sea. This report was confirmed by Leon des Avancher's discovery of the dwarfish Wa Berikomo, who are said to be only four and one-half feet high, and by D'Abbadie's visit to the Maze Mollea, who live a little further to the Herodotus tells of a dwarfish black people on the banks of the Niger. His description of the land still holds good; but, instead of negroes, Berbers and Tuareg inhabit those regions. At the present time the most northern place in West Africa which is inhabited by dwarfs is Tenda Maje, where they were met with by Mollien in 1818.

Pliny mentions, besides the dwarfs on the sources of the Nile, others living in what is now southeastern Belutchistan, where the Brahui, a people of Dravida lineage, are found. Ktesias speaks of pygmies who inhabited Central India. Mr. Rousselet found in that region the dwarfish Bandra Lok, who live in the Vindbias Mountains.

De Quatrefages considers all Asiastic dwarfish tribes as one group, which he calls Negrito, while the African ones are called Negrillo. His researches lead him to the conclusion that the traces of this race are found from India to the eastern extremity of New Guinea, and from Ceylon throughout India, Farther Inia, the Philippines, to Japan. In most regions they are mixed with other races. He considers the Dravida one of the most characteristic results of this mixture. It is only on the Andaman Islands and a few other isolated points that the pure race is still in existence. The author shows that individuals of Negrito type occur among the Pariahs of India, and that isolated communities in many parts of southeastern Asia have retained the anthropological character of this dwarfish race.

De Quatrefages considers the Negrito of all these widely separated regions one race, which originated in southern Asia. When the yellow race migrated southward and the white race eastward, they were compelled to take refuge on the islands and to migrate to more southerly countries. Thus they populated the Eastern Archipelago and

CANCEROUS GROWTHS.

Symptoms of the Principal Varieties Cancer of the Throat. There are four recognized varieties of cancer-epithelioma, encephaloid (like brain substance), colloid (like glue), and scirrhus, the two first named being the only ones found in this location, and they are mostly of the epithelioms variety. Mackenzie found only six encephaloid growths out of fifty-three cases of cancer and Ziemssen only means of a laryngoscope, are the same. The first sign of disease noticed is usually huskiness or weakening of the voice. At first this is transieut, but it finally becomes permanent. It has been noticed as long as three years before the more serious symptoms developed. The voice is never entirely lost, as it is in tuberculosis of the larynx, and the patient by a violent effort can make himself heard, even in the advanced stages of the disease. The hoarseness depends, early in the affection, upon an implification of one of the nerves concerned in the management of the vocal cords. At a late period it is due to ulceration and the presence of so-called "buds and vegetation" apon the inside of the organ. The breathing gradually and surely becomes embarrassed. This is due to the increasing size of this growth, and to the occurrence of oedema under the mucous membrane, which still further narrows the breathing space. At first there is difficult breathing on exertion only. then there comes a time when it is a labor to breathe at all, and the face becomes more or less blue from defective aeration of the blood. Attacks of spasm of the glottis and of suffocation are apt to come on, especially at night. The greatly (unfortunately this is only temporary) by extraction of portions of the growth. The act of swallowing becomes interfered with earlier or later, "Well, mum, ther work's not done to according to the size and location of the growth. If it begin high up, the intererence is early; if it begin in the vocal cords or below them, it is long before swallowing becomes difficult or out of the question. As ulceration progresses, swallowing becomes more difficult, both from obstruction and from pain, and pieces of food are liable to be thrown trouble, but after all. what would we into the air passages. In this way a men do if we hadn't somebody to whom fatal result may be brought about. Pressure over the larynx usually produces pain at an early period of the disease. This is at first of a dull, aching character, afterwards it is sharp, cut ting and constantly present. When the gullet is early involved, the pain is much nore intense and serious. - St. Louis
