Who know a good thing when they see it, cannot be fooled by a poor immitation of the well-known "Seal of North Carolina" Plug Cut Tobacro. Bear in mind that the genuine "Seal" costs you no more than the many trushy plug cuts that some dealers curry. See that you get the S-ul of North Caro-lina, and you will smoke no other tobacro.

DROPPING TO A HOG.

A Performance Which a Colored Brother Termed a Waste of Strength.

We rolled into one of the railroad stations in North Carolina just as the clocks were striking midnight, and it was as dark as black cats and the rain coming down with a steady pour. The station was closed, not a person about, and when the train had departed we were "left" in more senses than one. There were five of us altogether, and after a hasty consultation the Colonel started off down the platform saying he knew the way up town. I was next to him, and all of a sudden I missed him. Next instant I found him, however. My feet stepped out to find nothing to rest on, and one after the other three "came tumbling after." We had walked off the end of the platform and taken a drop of six feet, and the first two of us struck a big hog who was sweetly slumbering the night away. The porker got up just in time to be knocked down again by the third man, and before he got away he upset every one of us two or three times over. Each man was covered with mud when we reached the hotel, and none of us had got over being mad next morning when a colored man came around and inquired for "them ar' gents from de No'th." The Colonel went out to see what was wanted.

"Say, some of you'uns moas' killed my hog down to de depot last nite," said the man.

"Was that your hog?" "He was. Dat hog. he-"

The Colonel picked him up and gave him a lift which landed him on his head in a flower bed between the fence and the versuda. He maintained his poise for half a minute, and then his feet came down and he gathered himself and jumped the fence and broke for the country. We did not see him again, but later in the day an emissary of his called and inquired:

"Gem'len. de owner of dat hog doan' want any damages, but he does want to know how many of you fell on him?"

"The whole five, I think," answered the Colonel.

"Whew! De hull five?"

"Yes: why?"

"Why, sah, Jim is a-believin' dat you'un was de only one who cum down on de pig, an' dat yau scuffed him wid your finger an' broke his back. Lawd save me! but when you kin pick a nigger up an' frow him nine hundred feet high all alone what's de use of five men fallin' on a hog to paralyze his hind legs!"-Detroit Free Press.

That Cantankerous Old Woman

That Cantankerous Old Woman Described in the nursery ballad, "who lived upon nothing but vituals and drink," and yet "would never be quilet," was undoubtedly troubled with chronic indigestion. Her victuals, like those of many other elderly persons whose digestive powers have become impaired, didn't agree with her. This was before the area of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, or some one of her numerous friends and relatives would un-doubtedly have persuaded her to try the great specific for dyspepsia, consting tion and billious-ness. This would have been a measure of self-protection on their part, for she would soon have been enred and creased to disturb them with her clamor. The most obstinate cases of indigestion, with its attendant heartburn, da-tulence, constant uneasiness of the stomach and of the nerves, are completely overcome by this sovereign remedy. Chills and fever and billious remittent, rheumatism and kidney troubles are also relieved by it
