The performance was first-class in every way, and the holders of the lucky numbers drawing prizes received many beautiful and useful gifts. T. S. P.

DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH.

The tendency of our country is to build up a moneyed aristocracy. The power of money to beget money is like the increasing momentum of a stone as it falls to earth. The wealth of the country is more and more rapidly getting into the hands of the few. Andrew Carnegie one of our greatest money kings admits this fact. How to check this evil is the all absorbing topic of the political economist of the day. It must be met and settled speedily or the consequences will be upon us. It is the problem of the age and it is exciting the interest of all classes.

One of the remedies suggested is shown in Andrew Carnegie's recent article in the North American Review.

He says we should not check the causes that produce great fortunes but that we should make laws that will force these fortunes to be utilized for the public good. "There are three modes," says he, "in which surplus wealth can be disposed of. It can be left to the families of the decedents, or it can be bequeathed for public purposes; or, finally, it can be administered during their lives by its possessors." He contends it is injudicious to leave large fortunes to children. Experience teaches that large estates are more often ruinous than beneficial to the child. Only moderate sums should be bequeathed.

He says that great sums are not bequeathed to children because it is for their good, but as a matter of pride to advertise the large sum that persons accumulate.

He says: The growing disposition to tax more and more heavily large estates left at death is a cheering indication of the growth of a salutatory change in public opinion. The state of Pennsylvania now takes—subject to a few exceptions—one-tenth of the property left by its citizens. The budget presented in the British Parliament the other day proposes to increase the death duties; and most significant of all, the new tax is to be a graduated one. Of all forms of taxation, this seems the wisest. Men who continue hoarding great sums all their lives, the proper use of which for public ends would work good to the community, in the form of the state, cannot thus be deprived of its proper share. By taxing estates heavily at death the state marks its condemnation of the selfish millionaire's unworthy life.

Returned With His Prisoner.

Constable C. G. Burkhardt returned Monday from Blair, Nebraska, having in custody Sylvester Nicholls, the absconding street railway sub-contractor, whom he had arrested there on the charge of the larceny of six horses, upon which he had given a chattel mortgage, afterwards skipping out with them to Nebraska. He had borrowed $3000 there upon the horses, giving another mortgage. Nicholls says he was induced into running away by his partner, W. J. Martin, who it seems is nearly as guilty as Nicholls. The latter says this is his first crime, and that he did not intend at first to take the horses away. He was examined before Justice Humphrey Tuesday morning. —Herald.

"NO!"

Would you learn the bravest thing
That man can ever do?
Would ye be an uncrowned king,
Absolute and true?
Would ye seek to emulate
All ye see in story,
Of the noble, just and great,
Rich in real glory?
Would ye lose much bitter care
In the world below?
Bravely speak out when and where
'Tis right to utter "No!"

Learn to speak this little word
In its proper place:
Let no timid doubt be heard,
Clothed with skeptic grace.

Let thy lips, without disguise,
Boldly pour it out:
Though a thousand dialect lies
Keep hovering about.

For be sure our lives would lose
Future years of woe,
If our courage could refuse
The present hour with "No."

The parties who left Prineville Monday to search for George Nutting have returned. They made a thorough search through the country where he was last seen, but no trace of him could be found. They consider his disappearance a mystery which may never be fathomed.—Ochoco Review.

An exchange truly remarks that "the man who grows up in his native village is frequently regarded as a boy by his elders until he is well started down the declivity that ends in a hole. The stranger who comes into a place may or may not be an honest, upright man, but he is oftener pushed to the front than the well-known, unostentatious young man, who has grown from boyhood to man's estate without the transition being noticed by his everyday companions. This is one reason why so many young men become dissatisfied with their home surroundings and long to cast their lot in other quarters."

Every line in a newspaper costs something. If it is for the benefit of an individual or firm it should be paid for. If a grocer was asked to donate groceries to those able to pay for them he would refuse. The proprietor of a newspaper must pay for the free advertising if the beneficiary does not. And yet it is one of the tardiest things to be learned by many that a newspaper has space in its columns to rent, and must have it to live. To give it away or rent for anything less than living rate would certainly be fatal as for a landlord to supply houses and rent them free.
