HOME AND FARM.

Cold Water for Animals—Foot Rot in Sheep—The Fruit Cure—Painting Upon Glass—Orange Salad.

It is said a salve of equal parts of tar, tallow and salt, will cure the worst case of felon.

Rats and mice have as great an aversion to the odor of chloride of lime as humans.

A little flour shaken on your greased cake pan is a better preventative of sticking than paper.

For large raspberries or blackberries, head back severely, cutting out superfluous canes and mulch.

As the potato beetle is now busily at work it should be the aim to use paris green as soon as they appear on potato vines, in order to destroy as many of the beetles as possible. Every one that is destroyed lessens the number another year.

The best remedy for field-mice is to encourage the owls. For fear of damage to pigeons and poultry the owl is sometimes driven off when it appears. Its natural food is field mice, and it will never disturb birds as long as the mice can be had.

The hens will soon begin to molt, and will lay but few eggs during the process, which requires about three months. Old hens and early pullets begin to molt earlier than the late pullets, but all of them should have their new feathers complete before November.

One of the best garden implements is the rake. If used frequently on the young weeds it saves hoeing later in the season. By raking between the rows of plants once or twice a week but little labor will be required, while much benefit will be imparted to the crops.

An open well will soon be the resort of toads in this season, and if covered the work of so doing cannot be done too carefully. The curbing of the well should be laid in cement; and extend two feet above the top of the ground, upon which heavy boards should be fastened if a pump is used.

It is just as proper to keep rich milk separate from that of inferior quality and secure for it the extra price as it is to assort other articles on the farm. If dairy-men would make it a point to sell milk of the best quality only they could secure a class of customers who would not object paying an extra price for it.

When the time arrives for cutting the corn in the field it should be stored in the barn as soon as well cured. Leaving it stacked in the field invites waste and deterioration of quality. If there is insufficient room in the barn provide a cheap shelter. Exposure destroys one-half of the value of the crop.

It is more difficult to procure fresh eggs in summer than in winter in the market. During summer many eggs found in out-of-the-way nests are added to those in the basket, with the chances in favor of a portion of them being stale, while in winter the hens are confined to yards and lay in the poultry house.

When the pigs from the old sow fail to grow as fast as their companions from young sows it is an unmistakable indication that the old mother is failing and should be sent to the pork barrel. While the old sow is doing well don't discard her unless there is a certainty that she can be replaced with something better.

Orange Salad.—This is a delicious salad and easily made. Peel two or three sweet, juicy oranges and cut up the quarters in nice mouthfuls, removing all seeds. Serve with half a dozen bits of orange in a nest of three or four leaves of lettuce, and pour mayonnaise sauce over each nest. A similar salad of apples can be made when the apples are very ripe, juicy and sour.

Cold water from some wells is too cool to be given to animals. Especially in very warm weather it is judicious to draw the water long enough in advance to allow its chill to be removed before the animals drink it, especially if they are fatigued. A handful of fine corn meal stirred into a bucketful of water will be acceptable, and prevent injury to excessive drinking of cold water.

For Foot Rot in Sheep.—A Vermont flock-master of much experience says that the best method of doctoring sheep for foot-rot is to wet the feet of every sheep in the flock, sound or lame, thoroughly with kerosene oil, and put what sulphur you can take in the thumb and finger between the hoofs of each foot. Keep them in a dry place for twelve hours. Repeat this operation in about two weeks, and you will have no more trouble.

Mr. John Gould, of Ohio, thinks that the sooner the dairymen get out of the "rut" that milk is all alike, pound for pound, or that there is such a thing as a special cheese cow, the sooner the dairy business will be put upon a paying basis. While the butter performances of cows are published broadcast, the yields of these special cheese cows are notably withheld. The weight of milk daily is vaunted abroad, but the pounds of cheese it made, is conspicuously absent, simply because it isn't there in great amount. The butter yield of standard milk is a test of its cheese-making quality.

The Fruit Cure.—One or two pounds of fresh, ripe fruit daily eaten by most persons would make doctor's visits less frequent. There seems to be a cleansing action to good acid fruit, and especially to the apple and grape. Children and the young should be allowed all they wish. In Delaware doctors sometimes send certain patients in the peach orchards and tell them to eat all they want. Wilson, the ornithologist, suffered with a chronic malaria, which his medical adviser could not cure, and he cured himself by eating wild strawberries. The editor adds that he was once cured of malaria by going into a vineyard and eating grapes every day for a week, all he wanted, several pounds a day.
