

The richest man in California has been discovered in a small mining town near Chico. A gentleman who was a boarder for a number of years at the hotel in the town was under many favors to the housewife, who died last summer. He lauded the good woman's virtues, and at his own expense sent to Chico and had a monument, costing several hundred dollars, made, and it was hauled to the mountains and unloaded in front of the hotel. The gentleman informed the bereaved(?) husband of what he had done, and told him to take his team and haul the monument to the graveyard, about 100 yards distant. This the husband did, set the monument up, and on the next day presented the following bill: "To hauling the stone to the cemetery, $5; to setting it up, $5; to time, $5. Total, $15." Of course the kind husband was rewarded, and of course his reputation in that neighborhood is steadily on the increase.—Ex.
