

"I never care to buy goods of a man who does not in some way or other signify that he wants my trade," said a merchant. "Therefore, if a merchant does not advertise his goods I come to the conclusion that he is not very anxious to sell, and I would rather not buy of such men. The dealer who takes care to keep an invitation to purchase constantly before the public cannot help but reap a benefit."

Large numbers of counterfeit greenbacks are in circulation. The Oregonians say that every day some of them are presented at the banks with other money being paid in. They are on different national banks but are all of the denomination of $10. None of them are new and clean, if they were they would more easily be detected; they are worn and soiled, and many of them are patched. They are a very fair imitation of the genuine bills, and well calculated to deceive any one not an expert.
