

Stanley returns from the dark continent this time with as large a grist of discoveries apparently as ever on his previous trips. This time he adds lake Ubit, another Nile source, to his list, and also most important geographical discovery that lake Victoria Nyanza extends much further to the southwest than had been supposed, bringing the 'Victorian sea' to within 155 miles of lake Tanganyika and making its total area 26,900 square miles. This estimate makes the Victoria Nyanza one of the great lakes of the world, as lake Superior, the largest body of fresh water in the world, is only 22,000 square miles in extent.
