ACTIONS AND THEIR CONSEQUENCES.

The interdependence of the human family must be apparent to everyone who is in the slightest degree given to observation and reflection. "No man liveth to himself" is a truth so clearly taught that no sane man would deny it in theory, however unwilling he may be to admit it in practice.

There is something solemn and awful in the thought that there is not an actor thought in the life of a human being but carries with it a train of consequences, the end of which we may never trace. The good deed or thought will live, even though we may not see it fructify, and so with the bad; and no person is so insignificant as to be sure that his example will not do good on one hand nor evil on the other.

There is, indeed, an essence of immortality in the life of man, even in this world. No individual in the universe stands alone; he is a component part of a system of mutual dependencies; and by his several acts, he either increases or diminishes the sum of human good now and forever. No man's acts die utterly, but his good or his bad seeds will be bringing forth fruit after their kind and influencing generations of men for all time to come.

RURAL ADORNMENTS.

How often is it the case that the proprietor of a small farm, and with perhaps two children, will make an effort toward those adornments of the town which are wholly unsuited to his habits and surroundings, by building a house as large as a church, and perch a couple upon it.

If a man is disposed to advertise himself an accidental farmer by flaming architecture and appointments, there is little hope that he will ever do anything to the credit of farming interests, or contribute very largely to the charms of our rural landscape and the fashioning of our wayside homes; and when they shall take pride, as a body, in giving grace to these homes, the country will have taken a long step forward toward the refinements of civilization.

We can call to mind a small country home, not a hundred miles away, that had neither wealth of summer nor winter, and we commend it, but the buildings, the yard, the home adornments, were such as to cover defects of soil and timber and make a most desirable home. Indeed, the surroundings were such as to cause it to change proprietors three times within seven years, the writer being one of that number.

The beauties constitute a complete delineation of Jesus Christ himself; he was poor in spirit; he mourned; he wept; he was meek and lowly of heart; he was full of grace and truth; he was full of love and his drink were to do his Father's will; and he was pre eminent among those who were persecuted for righteousness sake.

What is a tattler? A vile leech sapping the life blood of human happiness. A busy body who listens gleefully to what one may say, either in a joke or pettishly, of a neighbor, and then carries it magnified and fixed up to suit themselves, and pours it into the ears of perhaps your best friends, and after succeeding in getting them to say something harsh, returns to you laden with the precious burden of strife and adds fuel to the already increasing flame.

The effect which Kemmler's execution has had upon society in general has been varied. It is regarded by some as cruel beyond description and a disgrace to a civilization like ours. Death by electricity is considered by others as next to painless, and therefore preferable to hanging. Others, professing more humane than either of the above classes, would abolish capital punishment altogether. All such questions can only be settled in the light of the past.

SOBER THOUGHTS FOR SOLEMN PEOPLE.

CHRIST'S METHOD OF TEACHING.

Jesus Christ gave His disciples a new method of reading the landscape and all natural objects. He turned nature into a great book of illustration and made it preach the doctrine of trust in the divine Fatherhood. He spoke of the lilies as pledges of God's care, and pointed to the fowls as an illustration of God's watchfulness over all life.

PERSECUTION.

Persecution in its various forms is only the development of a principle which must unavoidably exist until either Christianity or human nature be altered. There is a necessary repugnance between Christianity and human nature. One must be changed before it will combine with the other.

THE BEAUTIFUL.

The beauties constitute a complete delineation of Jesus Christ himself; he was poor in spirit; he mourned; he wept; he was meek and lowly of heart; he was full of grace and truth; he was full of love and his drink were to do his Father's will; and he was pre eminent among those who were persecuted for righteousness sake.

What is a tattler? A vile leech sapping the life blood of human happiness. A busy body who listens gleefully to what one may say, either in a joke or pettishly, of a neighbor, and then carries it magnified and fixed up to suit themselves, and pours it into the ears of perhaps your best friends, and after succeeding in getting them to say something harsh, returns to you laden with the precious burden of strife and adds fuel to the already increasing flame.

The circulation of the blood—quickened and enriched—bears life and energy to every portion of the body; it should only be known to the bosom of demons. Are you a tattler? Do you not among your neighbors the seed of discord and hate? If so, in the name of humanity desist. We are all liable to err, but deep is the sin of them who, taking our weakness for their capital, destroy the happiness of our neighbor by tattling.—Ex.
