PUBLEMENS AND PROPRIETORS.

WHERE ARE THEY! The moty arrant.

Some men are of so slow and with the Eastern and Middle States, a race of men—if we are believe our parents and the States, a race of men—if we are believe our parents and the States have inversed the states of the States There lived some twenty or thirty years ago in the Eastern and Midthat should measure a given amount; he could be trusted to find such—to cut it, to score it, to load terial substance we affirm that we such—to cut it, to score it, to load it; if the gearing broke he could devise some way to dislodge it; and devise some way to dislodge it; and sure and prompt delivery at the point indicated. The Irishman, on the other hand, balks at the first turn; he must have a multitude of chains; he needs a love to aid with chains; he needs a boy to aid with the team, and another to carry a bar; he spends an hour in his denotful estimate of dimensions, and he cuts into the bark three feet from the ground so as to leave a "nate" Irish stump. He chops and sweats, splits his ax helve in adapting it for a lever, and comes back about noon for three or four men to give him a boost with the tree.

THE TEMPTATION.

Any man who proposed to himself the fabrication of the story of the fine bird, but he does not consume human genius to contrive a consistent eclipse anything we have seen in this devil, or to maintain in dialogue the market. Whatever people may say to the contrary, the fact remains that plain speaking is neither welcome mor appreciated; it is apt to be considered a liberty if not an impertinence, and the recipients of it are inclined to regard it in an unfavorable light. We all profess to adable light. We all profess to admire candor, but the fact is, it is the last thing we do admire, especially if it contravenes one's own pacially if it contravenes one's own that Christ should relate his experiments and preconceived notions.
