But

esting They first select a suitable hole fish enough to be an object. In this ease it was about 200 yards long, thirty feet wide, and varying in depth to ten fect. At the bottom lazily swimming around were a number of big fish. From a sack Johnny produced two light gill nets, which were stretched across the stream about forty yards apart. Then he produced the tips of a ear, which were bound to a strong willow pole. These tips, when thrust into a fish, come off the pole, but are held by buckskin strips. Now we are ready for business. Rocks are thrown into the water and the startled fish dart about, and in a moment the floats of a net are jerked violently under the The fish writhes and twists, water. water.
