THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Gev. Pennoyer's message is characteristic of the man. Criticisms of the public document are not confined wholly to the republican party. John, Adam, Moses, Jesse and three Devines were there. Even the democrats find in it doctrines not altogether palatable, while the Alliance can claim that it has not been altogether overlooked No matter what party looked. No matter what party claims to reign in the gubernatorial office, it is evident that Sylvester Pennoyer rules. Very rarely is it to criticise; but (unless our own experithe case that all the principles in any political platform are embobied in one man, and in this case the the man is found to be larger than faith; and now you can always get pi the man is found to be larger than the party. Politics is the science of government, and in reducing, classifying and arranging the principles of government according to some scientific plan, it is customary to accept or reject principles accordingly as they mash or fail to adjust themselves to the working parts of the political manufacture. or fail to adjust themselves to the working parts of the political machinery. It is just barely possible that the labelling process has been earried a little too far. The two parties find themselves so nearly in accord upon general principles at times, that it frequently becomes necessary to incubate something distinctive, something not in the other platform, and the forces are other platform, and the forces are ingmen, is converted into a prune arranged for another campaign.
We admire the man, though we ples in toto. Some profess to find in his message a bid to catch the votes of the Alliance. We claim towns on the coast, as it should be we ask, when will we get a survey and Eche answers, when! not the ability to read the Governor's mind, but an explanation of this overlapping of party lines may be sought in the fact that no party has a monopoly of intelli-gence, honesty or political foresight, but that some good is, probably, to at J.
