We involuntarily associate with the art of money-getting a class of faculties which are as much out of place in the White House as a monkey in the sanctuary of the Lord. As the clections are now conducted it is possible to corrupt a few individuails and thus ride into position and power, but the masses cannot be so corrupted. We want men of a high order of talent, and this we can hardly promise ourselves as long as periodical auctions are held at our State capitals and money is used to buy position by concealing defect of stature. Many of our talented men are rich, it is true, but we must not conclude from this that all rich men are talented men. Not every man who can quell a street fight is qualified to command the armies of a nation; and to conclude that a speculator in real estate or mining stock is competent to preside over a nation's treasury is unreasonable, illogical, madness.

Peter lait before the men and brethren an explanation o the case, and the election was determ ined by the giving forth of lots. Lamand impotent conclusion! Had Perewaited a little longer he would have looked with contempt and shame up on this miserable shift. Matthias waelected to the apostleship and to obscurily: he was never heard of more a rebuke which properly finished an old and poor way of doing things without utterly disregarding the prayerfulness and religous impatience of honest men who were anxious to keep forms and numbers in perfec order. After the descent of the Holy Ghost, no lot drawing was needed to enable this same Peter to see in Cornelins the Gentile an elect saint and to detect in Simon the sorcerer : child of the devil. So much for a true spiri ual instinct. We hear no more of lot casting or of the formal tests which many Old Testament men defight to set up in times of perplexity. A log-rolling and basket supper a Waterloo in the near future.

There was a meeting here this week, The Monday first in March, And men had come from far and near With pride as stiff as starch.

The house was called to order
By the chairman of the fourd,
And tangues began to rattle
Like dry peas in a goord.

Last year's clerk was re-elected, For he understood the work; Said be did not want it, But still he wouldn't shirk.

Was a good and honest man; You shall have straight goods, dear reader That always is our plan.

The question next before the house
Was how to get the wood—
They did not want to pay for it,
Let that be understood.

Good men stood up and argued About the present law, While others only stamped around And wagged their under jaw.

The point at last was settled, Their "chewing" came to paught And now we'll have good ash wood

At the next annual meeting,
If ever that shall be,
And we can spare our "devil"
We will send him there to see,
