In carrying out his illustration, Mr. Jago says: "Is evil then a necessity? My answer is, most assuredly it is, for if good had not its opposite, spiritual life would be as impossible as would the vegetable life without the opposite of heat."

This statement naturally follows the bad logic and reasoning of the writer of it. Evil is want of confermity to the laws of God, and be it ever so small it works an injury. Gione is conformity to said law, hence no harm can be done by it.
