Gloves and Veils.

Will gloves go back to the Renaissance for styles, as the cloak has done? You know they wore these gloves all covored with embroideries and precious stones; the cuff, willening as it reached the arm, was an incrustation of gold and aliver and precious settings. It was a heavy gauntiet, not a glove. It is not likely gauntiet, not a glove. It is not likely that these will take, as we say in fashion pariange. Women will have the good taste to cling to the plain kid glove, which shows the perfect shape of the hand. The buttoned glove is now in as much favor as the missopetaire. It is owing to the very long sleeves worn with every gown, except with full dress. The tast colors are worn, less and the light shades more. Did you not often wonder where the kid, akins come from ngri annue mere lan you do no trom wonder where the kid gloves in the world? When Lase the mountains of gloves sold at the Lourne and the Bon Marche in the bargain season? I wonder if there in the away of manufacturing skins, or if there are hold which like alien if there are not kids which, like sheep who are sheared every year, can be skinned and have a skin grow on again for next year's flaying. Veils are no longer worn down to the tip of the nose, but all over the face. The kinds of tulles and nets sold for veil-ing are innumerable. The beauty spot ing are infinite note. The result, the veiling is the next becoming not the spoke but the next digital. Everybody wears it here. Then there is fancy net-ting, studded with sited, gold and allver beading and expangles. Some of them beading and espangles. Some of them are as thick as the old fashioned Chan-tilly vell which our grandmothers wore. French women have never taken kindly to the white wells. They are one of the indications by which we single out a foreign woman. Nor do they incase the front hair with in illusion to keep it down or to keep the ringlets from uncurling. The Mexican Messiah. Prime, factor, ireland has not only a good claim, hist really the best claim to be the Tiagallan of the Mexicans. It is the most western part of Encourt the most western part of Europe; it is a multier, and in the earlier centuries of all the Christian era: was known as the "Huly Island," Between A. D. 500 and A. D. 500 It was the most active center of missionary enterprise in Europe, and its missionaries were conspicuous above Its missionaries were conjunctions above all others for their daring maritime ad-ventures. It is natural, therefore, to suspect that Ireland may have been the home of Queizatopati, and, if that were so, to expect that early frish records would contain some references to him and his extraordinary voyage.

Upon this the inquiry suggests itself. Upon this the inquiry suggests their, Do the early trist chronicles, which are, voluminous and minute, contain any-thing relating to a missionary voyage across the Atlantic at all corresponding to that which Quetzatcoati must have taken from some part of western Europer To one who, step by step, had arrived at this stage of the present inquiry, it was not a little startling to come across an obscure and almost forgothen record, which is, in all its main features, in most striking conformity with the Mex-ican legend of Quetzacoati. This is the curious account of a transatlantic voy-age of a certain Irish ecclesiastic named St Brendan in the middle of the Sixth century-about A. D. 550. The narralive appears to have attracted little or no attention in modern times, but it was widely diffused through the middle ages. -Dominick Daly in Popular Science Monthly.
