The capital city can feel proud to have gone through the present crisis without a bank or business failure of any kind. If this record is kept up it will be a great feather in Salem's cap. To become solid city out of a thousand would boost us up not a little.—Salem Journal.

A sweet girl graduate thus describes how a goat butted a boy out the front yard. "He hurled the previous end of his anatomy against the boy's forehead with all earnestness and velocity which, backed by the goat's voraciousness, imparted a momentum that was not relaxed until he landed on the terra firma beyond the goat's jurisdiction."

A settler named Ray Gee, who lives near Detroit at the eastern terminus of the Oregon Pacific while out deer hunting was accidentally shot Sunday, by Alex Correll, his companion, in the mountains near Mt. Jefferson. The latter's rifle was accidentally discharged by a bush catching the hammer. The injured man was taken to the residence of Nat Bowman, and a physician from Salem, who happened to be sojourning there dressed the wound, which was in the fleshy part of the leg below the knee. It is thought the injury will not prove serious.

A gentleman who has just arrived from Walla Walla reports that there are between 500 and 600 idle men in the vicinity of that city. The outskirts of the city wherever there is timber or shelter is being used as their temporary homes until they can find some kind of work to do. Cases of petty stealing are continually occurring, the gardens, which are numerous near the city, being the principal grounds for operation.

The S. P. Co. have made a slight reduction in freight rates between Portland and Roseburg and a corresponding raise between Albany and Roseburg. This was intended to force our merchants to patronize Portland wholesale houses exclusively, no doubt, and thus destroy the business of the Oregon Pacific. Instead of this, the merchants of this section will raise prices a little and trade where they please, as before, and the people will foot the bill. This change of rates was approved by the board of railroad commissioners who are paid by the people and owned by the railroad company. Will the time ever come when the people are strong enough to control the legislature and abolish this useless and costly commission?—Review.

Here we are hustling across the street and around corners to keep out of the way of the bicycle, but what will become of us now that an eastern man has perfected an electric bicycle, propelled by a storage battery. The time is at hand when a forlorn pedestrian will have to take to the roofs of the houses to save his life.—Ex.

Daniel Tarter of Union county was lodged in the penitentiary this week under sentence of 12 years for manslaughter. He was brought here by Deputy Sheriff J. F. Pfy. The expense to the state of bringing this convict to the penitentiary was $123.

Aardy Caldwell, a well to do farmer of Bowling Green, Ky., aged about 60, married his third wife some time ago but they were unable to get along and separated. They met by agreement for a division of their household goods, and after an amicable settlement, Caldwell shot his wife dead and then suicided.

The street commissioner P. W. Morgan has a force of carpenters at work putting in new cross-walks all over the city, some of which have been needed for a number of years; and he has served notices on a great many to fix up their sidewalks and to put in new ones. This winter will find our city in better shape for sidewalks than it has ever been.

The lowest bid for the construction of the proposed addition to the state reform school was J. A. Hazel, $46,098. This is considerably in excess of the estimated cost of the addition, and it seems probable that all of them will be rejected and the plans for the improvement modified so as to bring the cost within the figures the board thinks allowable for it. But on the absence of both Secretary McBride and Superintendent McElroy, no formal action can be taken.

Jas. Davidson left yesterday for a visit at Vancouver, Wash.

Parties who have been there say the covered county bridge built last year across the north of the Santiam three miles above Mehama and costing $800, is not used much. There is no road cut after you cross the bridge. An occasional blaze is all the sign of a road, or probably ever will be.—Salem Journal.

Last Saturday at Union an accident occurred at the Oregon Roller mills in which Linn Philips, an 8 year old boy, lost his life. He was going through the mill alone having no particular business except a desire to be around the machinery. The head miller was on the third floor when he heard two dull thuds. On descending to the second floor the lifeless form of the boy was lying on the floor with his skull crushed in and his body otherwise fearfully mangled. It is supposed his clothing became entangled in the machinery. He had been warned to keep away from the machinery.

A Salem man in Portland Saturday and watched the run on the banks. One man drew his deposit amounting $800 and put it in his pocket. When he got back through the crowd he found that some one had robbed him of every cent of it. A woman put the money which she drew in a small reticule. When she got out of the jam she carried nothing but the handle of the bag; as someone had cut the body away with a sharp instrument. The crowd was full of pickpockets and sneak thieves, watching their opportunities to make a profit out of the excited condition of the depositors who were drawing out their funds.

The Pendleton Tribune says: The number of idle men in Pendleton grows no smaller fast. Lodging houses are full, feed stables are crowded by the blanket brigade, and even the woods above and below town, swarm with men, for the most part honest, but "dead broke" and eager to work. The outlook is gloomy beyond words, and the logic of the situation points to harder times yet, while there must of necessity be much suffering, and even crime grow out of the enforced idleness of so many men.

Hon. D. P. Thompson, our examiner to Turkey, is authority for the statement that instead of sending missionaries to Turkey, matters could be improved by having Turkish missionaries come to this country. He says there is more idleness and dissipation in any American city than there is in Constantinople. The strongest drink the Turks indulge in is coffee, and there is not a saloon in all Constantinople. Every man has a business and minds it without sticking his nose into that of his neighbor. This is a feature of trade which it would be very desirable to import into Oregon.—Ex.

Mr. Thomas Batte, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Cholera, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by M. A. Miller Druggist.

Congress will meet next Monday, and we hope we will have better times.

Some new comers arrived in Pendleton Saturday, per covered wagon, from Lane county, having crossed the Cascades by the old military road. They were dissatisfied with all of the region traversed until they reached Umatilla county, and describe the country after leaving the mountains as being dried up and dusty. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Wooten and Messrs. Halmire, Enghouse and Bowers. All will probably locate.—Pendleton E. O.

A crowd of friends of Hon. M. A. Miller and wife gathered at their home last Tuesday evening and gave them a party in honor of the 55th anniversary of their wedding. It was to have been a surprise but they got wind of the affair and met them with ice cream and cake. A most enjoyable evening was spent, after which the crowd went to the residence of T. A. Swan and gave him a serenade in honor of his 52nd birthday.

John M. Harper, a well-known farmer of Union Flat, and old pioneer of the Palouse country, was hauling hay from the field. The double-tree broke and the wagon tongue dropping frightened the horses so they ran away, the wagon was overturned and Mr. Harper, falling on his head and shoulders, broke his neck, death being almost instantaneous. Less than three years ago, a brother, Milton Harper, met an almost similar death.

Yesterday afternoon says the Astoria Budget, the 18-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Olsen who lives near McGregor's mill at Upper town, was accidentally drowned by falling into a washtub. At the time of the accident Mrs. Olsen was outside of the house talking with some neighbors, and on going in found her little son dead in the tub of water. Medical assistance was at once called in but all efforts to bring the child to life was of no avail.

An immense harvest awaits the sickle in Marion and Polk counties. The first grain will be marketed this week. The first farmer who gets in a load of oats or wheat and applies it paying his debts will be a public benefactor and will do more to stimulate confidence and increase courage than the many thousands who will come after him. There is plenty of money in the country to pay the market price of anything that will be turned off the farms the next sixty days and put millions of dollars into circulation. And it is good money. There will be some financial stringency and some people will be hard up for some time, but the worst is over.—Salem Journal.

The establishment of a woolen factory in Wallawa county seems now to be among the assured possibilities of the county. A company is being organized for that purpose. Subscriptions toward shares in the company are being solicited, and the people of the county are responding favorably. This is the first gleam of light to follow the darkness of capital tied up waiting for policy. May it be the usher of the broad daylight of prosperity in its full measure.—Dalles Chronicle.

W. Horton of Corvallis, had the misfortune to lose a horse while crossing the Willamette river Friday afternoon, says the Daily News of that place. He was hauling wood from the island, a few miles above town, and had driven his team on a flat boat improvised for ferrying purpose. He drove his team well to the far end of the boat in order to make room for another team and wagon that they might be taken across at the same time. As Mr. Horton drove onto the boat a loose board frightened one of the horses which became unmanageable, and the team was, in all haste, unhitched from the wagon, when the animal sprang overboard, taking the other with him. The team swam nearly to the opposite bank, but turned and came back, when a skiff was brought into use and the horses caught, but before a landing was reached the fractious one was drowned, and pulled out of the water by his mate.
