A Useful Leg.

In the human body, at least, art never replaces nature with better work, but when false teeth refuse to ache and wooden legs save mon from drowning one is tempted to make some exceptions. An Alabama duck hunter had a curious adventure one day while on the water in a skiff. He had lost a leg in a rail-road accident and wore a cork substiroad accident and work a cora automo-tate, useful for ordinary purposes, but preventing him from following game ez-cept in a heat. On this occasion, as he was an expert marksman, he had almost loaded the skiff with ducks when, in reaching after a particularly fine bird, he overreached nd upset the boat. Down went the birds, the gun and the hunter, and as there was a swift current at that point the boat drifted away be-fore he came to the surface. Being un-able to swina, the lunter clutched wild ly for a support, but found none, and would certainly have been drowned had it not been for his cork leg. It kept him afloat, and at first he was overjoyed: then he became apprehen-sive. The cork leg had a tendency to invert him in the water, but after struggling against this for some time he managed to unstrap the limb and use it

It was then easy to paddle ashore, and the hunter was saved, although he lost nearly everything else but his life.— Yonth's Companion.

What Drumlins Are.

Professor Barton of the Institute of Technology gave a half hour talk before the students of the Chauncy Hall school the students or the characteristic functions of the other morring on "Drumlins." It is only within a few years that any ex-tended research has been made into the history of drumlins. The investigations in this state have been conducted largely by Professor Barton himself. A drum-lin, as the speaker explained, is a mound in, as the speaker explained, is a mound of material projecting upward from the surface of the earth to a sufficient height to be called a hill. This mound or hill is made from loose bits of earth and rocks torn from ledges at the time—some thousands of years ago—when this part of the earth was covered with a sheet of ice at least 4,000 feet in thickness. As this was sheet moved off to the south 100 at last 4,000 how in the south-this vast sheet moved off to the south-ward it carried with it quantities of earth and small fragments of rock, which were deposited in valleys or heap-dist deposition.
