Double Thanksgiving Day.

Oregon's governor has again taken time by the forelock and by his usual characteristic manner he has passed his annual Thanksgiving proclamation.

The document is made intensely interesting by its reference to the action of congress on the same question, and also by the fact that he not only did not wait for Cleveland's proclamation to be issued first, but appointed the fourth instead of the last Thursday in November.

The proclamation reads as follows:

I do hereby appoint the fourth Thursday of the present month as a day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the blessings He has bestowed upon this commonwealth during the present year. God has indeed been most beneficent to our state and nation, and yet a just and ill-vised congressional legislation, having made gold alone full legal tender money, has so dwarfed and paralyzed business that the bounties of Providence are now denied to hundreds of thousands of people within the national domain, who are not only without employment, but are also without the means of procuring food, raiment, or shelter. While, therefore, the people of Oregon return thanks to God for His goodness, I do most earnestly recommend that they should devoutly implore Him to dispose the president and the congress of the United States to secure the restoration of silver as full legal tender money, in accordance with the policy of the fathers of the republic, whereby our industries may be revived, and the honest toilers of the land may procure their daily bread, not as alms, but as the reward of their labor.

Done at the capital, Salem, Oregon, November 1st, 1893.

SYLVESTER PENNOYER,
Governor.
Attest: Geo. W. McBRIDE,
Secretary of State.

An issue of the Oregonian, prior to the publication of the President's proclamation, commented on Pennoyer's action as follows:

Not satisfied with telling the president of these United States to mind his own business, Oregon's estimable governor has, figuratively speaking, given Grover Cleveland another slap in the face by issuing a proclamation to the effect that the fourth Thursday of the present month shall be the day for all good Oregonians to give thanks for everything, excepting the passage of the silver repeal bill. The fact that custom and courtesy required Governor Pennoyer to wait for the president's proclamation before issuing his own, had no weight with Oregon's independent governor. The other states of the Union will celebrate Thanksgiving on the date proclaimed by the president, which (if he follows established precedent) will be on the last Thursday of this month, the 30th. Pennoyer's Thanksgiving will fall on Thursday, November 23, one week in advance of the other states, and Oregon will have the proud distinction of being ahead of the world in something else besides big red apples. Governor Pennoyer's proclamation being constitutional and law in this state, the Mardi Gras prize carnival will take place at the exposition building on the evening of Wednesday, November 22, the eve of Pennoyer's Thanksgiving day.

Elder Wayback Goes To Church.

Last Monday afternoon, a week ago, I was out to my field to take potatoes into my wagon, and tryin' to figure out how much I was owing the bosted Lebanon bank on my deposit of $13.50. I had about covered the tail-board of my wagon with figgers when Earn Clothopper, who had been up to Lebanon, rode up to drive me my mail. "What is the news up to Lebanon," says I. "Oh, nothing much," says he, "except there be a revival at one of the churches." "Well, that town needs it powerful bad," says I. "I never see such a town," says he. "I hearn tell to-day, that the Council had to have the electric lights raised 50 feet higher, to keep the folks from smilin' at the 'lectricity,'" says he. "You don't say," says I, "but who's smilin' the revival?" "Oh, a couple of Salvation Army fellers," says he, "and they do say, they make a heap of noise." "How long be they goin' to stay," says I. "Until they take Lebanon for the Lord, so they say." "Well, I guess they didn't size up the job before they tackled it," says I. "Be the Devil had scared?" says I. "Not a bit," says he; "they are startin' another saloon," and he rode off, while I sent on loadin' and figurin'. I couldn't get that revival out of my mind, until I made up my mind to go up and see the "take Lebanon for the Lord," that very evening; so I sent. I was at the church rather early, and watched the people come in until the house was jammed full. They had a song service first. Bro. Turner, a mighty good man, assisted the choir, by selecting the songs as fast as they could sing 'em. I was mightily interested in that choir. Their singing was all sharp and flat, for they did not have time for rests. There was a couple of fellers on the back seat, who assisted them mightily by singing a tenner doot, for when one was high the other was low.

By and by the preaching began, so I listened with all the ears that I had; and when he was done I never felt so mean in all my life. I didn't know whether I was an old-time-sinner, or a confidence man, or an honest God-fearin' Christian, who had been tryin' all his life 'to do unto others as he would have them do to him' (except of course when I am trainin' horses). Well, I always knew there was a lot of toughs around Lebanon, but from the way that feller preached, all the men are drunkards or dead-beats and all the women harlots or hypocrites.

I can't sleep sound any more for thinkin' of that sermon. Seemed to me it was meant for the sinner of the earth, and I guess it was. Maybe that's the way they carry on revivals down in Frisco, but we don't do that way down to Camas Flat. Seems like sinners have to be ripped up the back in order to convert them now-a-days. But beer-garden experiences in a sermon don't do no good, in the opinion of

WATERLOO GARBAGE.

Mud Mills, Ditch, Battery, Dancing.

We have been enjoying some good weather of late (Oregon weather).

The roads are all but impassible at present; the streets are in poor condition, having been summer-fallowed during the summer. They present a fair exemplification of the softness of the "Pads" who rule or ruin a place.

There is some talk of a 50-bbl. flouring mill here, but first the community is asked as usual to furnish everything and let some one take all the "Toll." Why not combine and dig ditch and build mill by a joint stock company.

The Ditch Co. have been disposing of considerable stock of late, and are jubilant over the success of their plan; work will soon commence, when we predict a steady growth for ours, the best town in the valley.

E. A. Gleason gave a public exhibition according to the Marquis of Queensberry rules, minus the ropes, last Saturday. A case of aggravation no doubt.

The science of dancing, as developed by the average Waterlooite, consists in a few vigorous hops, preceded by a lassy stamp; said stamp can be heard a distance of seven blocks. The good old days of smooth dancing have departed (from here at least), and in its stead we have something that cannot be described; a kind of cross between a barrel factory and George Sanford's machine shop.

J. H. Turpin informs us he expects better times, and is stocking up in anticipation of the coming holidays. May his success equal his zeal in assisting the town by his advice and money. No petitioner is sent away empty handed.

J. G. Gross still remains at the old stand. The hard times has made its impression on his smile, but otherwise he and his store are unchanged; trade and boarders follow him to the Fall View house, and he is content.

Jas. Harbin, the W. D. Co.'s foreman, has an affection of the heart. As he was once cured of a similar attack, his friends entertain strong hopes for his recovery.

A soup house will be open for the unfortunate, on and after Nov. 15, 1893. The "Waterloo Legion of Honor" takes this way to provide for its members.

Of all the dry speeches in the last decade it has been our lot to hear, was one delivered in the church by the Hon. Steen. It consisted of an extract from the Oregonian, interspersed by a few of Rok's old anecdotes. To think that the average man will be persuaded by such an orator is preposterous. Waterloo will vote as ever unless they produce something other than an arithmetical progression or a simple problem in compound interest. Interest does not frighten the average Oregonian—he is used to it.

A New Year's edition of the "Waterloo Dissector" will be issued. Copies can be obtained by addressing H. W. Parker or leaving orders at the drug store. It promises to be something good in its line, a bird's eye view as it were, of Waterloo and its citizens, their aims and deeds for the past 12 months, interspersed by pen pictures of the "City Fathers" and legal luminaries of the burg. There may be an exodus shortly after from this place, but "our gain will be someone's loss," an old Waterloo proverb.
