Knox county, Ill., is probably the divorce center of the United States. In the last five years the number of divorces have averaged one to every seven marriages.

The people generally have observed one and will observe the other Thanks-giving day. The pasters alone are making a political question out of the dual holiday.-Statesman.

The editor of the Statesman must have a different idea of the meaning of the phrase "the people generally," as it is used in the above article, from the one that nearly if not quite—every one else has. We always supposed it to mean the majority of the people, but if the number of people who celebrated Pennoyer's Thanksgiving day come within the meaning of that phrase it must mean a minority, emphati-

The Knights of Labor have lost a wise, determined and conservative Grand Master in the resignation of Mr. Powderly. This body is large, cumbersome and hard to manage, yet their former chief has kept it well in hand. They have elected J. R. Sovereign his successor, a rather unfortunate name for the head of an order composed of work-

The aiders and abettors of that disgusting sheet, the Portland Sun-day Mercury, have at last met in part the just reward for their crimes. This paper has thrust upon the public the most revolting scandals, clothed in spicy and at-tractive words. They have un-earthed long forgotten family skeletons and by threatening to perade the ruits of their ghoulish industry have wrung money from many people. They have made innocent people to suffer. In a word, this paper has been a hideous disgrace to jenenslism, and its abettors de serve to dwell for a time in the "pen," where they have so often threatened to send their victims unless hush-money was forthcom-

Urapp & Co's big worded circu-lar on the financial outlook reads as follows: Confidence breeds credit where courage leads the way. Withholding enterprises is rejecting prospecity. To quit exertion is to invite disester. Losing a profit is better than losing a sale. Better divide a dime than lose a dollar. divide a dime than lose a dollar. To relight a furnace is to start a home mission. Spindles and looms in rapid motion sometimes outrun a bank note. To give credit in the bank parlor is to get it at the teller's window. A good advertisement generally gets to the bank before the casek to pay for it. Doubt is a ghost which runs away from faith. Day's works diligently exchanged multiply opportunity and preserve the wealth of a nation.

There is something peculiarly interesting to the mind in the rela-tion which an editor sustains to his readers. To many—to most of them—he must be personally unknown, yet the tie which unites him to them is perhaps all the stronger for that fact. For them the continually thinks and plans; he consults their tastes, seeks to discover their needs and to supply their wants. Not even his most autimate friends are so constantly in his thoughts as these unseen in his thoughts as these unseen friends to whom he speaks through the printed page. When introduced to a stranger who says: "I have long been a constant reader of your journal," what a flash of recognition passes from eye to eye! This man, he feels, is no stranger; he knows my habits of thought, is sequinited with my ideas on many subjects has learned. I trust to subjects, has learned, I trust, to value my character. How can he seem like a stranger? In the same way when note or telegram anway when note or telegram announces to the editor the death of one whose name has been on his subscription list for years, he feels, ith a sudden sinking or heart that "Il miss from his silent auditors, sympathizing and response."
